Frank A. Munsey, able business man, is dead. Owner at different times of 18 newspapers, Mr. Munsey died owner of only two. Some he sold, others he suppressed or "merged," to clear up newspaper situation. He was a benefactor of the newspaper field, and as such will be remembered.

Frank Munsey could carry a heavy load without worrying. He said to this writer, "carrying 200,000 shares of stock on margin never bothered me. Now that I have lost interest in stocks I never think of them."

Munsey possessed the power of undivided concentration. He made and spent many millions and undoubtedly has left many millions. He enjoyed his 71 years of life and, a very temperate man, he should have lived longer. Many regret the death of a sincere friend.

In Florida even mail cars and the postal system are jammed and held up because of embargoes and "impossibly" excessive shipments.

S. Davies Warfield, foreseeing the coming trouble, built one new road across Florida and several branches, and some time ago he put Clement S. Ucker, one of his assistants, an able railroad man, in charge of freight congestion to make a general survey of the proposition. It will take, with the best intentions and the hardest work, months to straighten out the Florida snarl. Such congestion has never been known in American railroading.

The Peabody Museum at Yale — please shudder — contains an exhibition purporting to prove the evolution theory, showing man's "biological ascent from protoza to man."

To be told that you are descended from monkeys is bad enough but 10,000 times worse is the idea that your ancestors include the protozoa. Anti-evolutionists would be ashamed to recognize such relatives, of whom any number could live happily in a thimbleful of salt water.

Frank M. Zulauf grieved nine months for his wife, then killed himself. His last words, written on the wall of the room in which he inhaled illuminating gas, were "I sleep."

Sixteen hundred million human beings that Mr. Zulauf left on earth behind him would like to know whether he really sleeps or is wide awake, and what he is doing.

That "perchance to dream" troubles many.

"To him that hath shall be given." Mrs. White, a Vanderbilt, inherited a Fifth avenue house built by old William H. Vanderbilt. She sells it for

NATION'S CHIEF ABDICATES TO SANTA CLAUS

Uncle Sam's Hired Men and Women Shop in Capital.

HANG WREATHS

Christmas for Coolidges Will be Typical Home Affair.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24. — Calvin Coolidge, director general of the capital's vast army of federal employes, abdicated temporarily today in deference to Santa Claus, that patron saint of the Yuletide, while thousands of Uncle Sam's hired men and women hurried through their last-minute Christmas shopping and prepared to avail themselves of the three-day holiday provided by executive order.

To Mrs. Coolidge and her son, John, fell the pleasant task of decorating the big white mansion. Wreaths of holly and evergreen were hung in all the windows, facing out on Pennsylvania avenue. Inside, and up in the private living room on the second floor, a small black cedar, shipped all the way from Wisconsin by a well-wisher, stood lighted and decorated, waiting for the opening of the family presents tomorrow morning.

Outside, criss-crossed back and forth over the porte-cochere of the main entrance, hung huge electric light bulbs strung up by White House electricians to illuminate the front grounds for the annual Christmas eve singing of carols.

Christmas for the Coolidges will be a typical home affair. Only the three will gather around the little tree in the living room tomorrow morning, in marked contrast to the Yuletide two years ago before the younger son, Calvin, died. Then, a huge tree erected in the historic blue room made an elaborate ceremony of the occasion.

MOTORIST FINED $100 BY MAYOR

Clarence Taylor, Dry Run, was fined $100 and costs by Mayor Charles Brown this morning when he pleaded guilty to a charge of driving a motor vehicle while intoxicated.

Taylor was arrested near the corner of Dresden avenue and Seventh street by Chief of Police McDermott and Patrolman Lister at 5 o'clock last evening after he is alleged to have crashed into an automobile owned and driven by F. W. Miller, St. Clair avenue baker.

The prisoner agreed to pay the damage done to Miller's car. Taylor paid $35 as his fine and promised to pay the $65 balance in semi-monthly installments.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 24.—David Evans, farmer and his son, Wendle, were in a hospital here today for treatment following an attack by a cow on the Evans farm near Gallipolis. The animal, which sank its teeth in the arms of her victims, was believed to be suffering from rabies.

MURDER CHARGE FILED AS CHARLES DEVIE'S FUNERAL IS DEFERRED

PRISONERS ALSO ALLEGED TO HAVE ADMITTED THEY ROBBED VICTIM

Authorities Claim Youths Asserted They Carried Man in Drunken Stupor From Third to Second Floor of Vacant Building, But Deny he Was Dead When They Left Him.

Arrested last night by Wellsville police on charges of suspicion following the mysterious death Monday of Charles Devie, 30, of 605 Ridge avenue, Northside, Pittsburgh, Raymond Carroll, Lester Rowley and William McKinnon, of East Liverpool, and Anthony Dash, of Wellsville, are held without bail today in the jail there pending a hearing before Mayor Frank C. Blackburn.

According to Chief of Police John Fultz, murder charges have been preferred against the quartet, who, grilled last night at the police chief's home in Aten avenue, are alleged to have admitted furnishing Devie with liquor and then, while the man was in a drunken stupor, robbing him of $20 and later depositing him, unconscious, on the top landing of a flight of stairs at 1321 Main street..

McKinnon and Rowley were arrested in East Liverpool last night at 10 o'clock, and Dash and Carroll were apprehended in Wellsville by Patrolman Pugh shortly before on warrants issued by Chief Fultz, following a search that had been under way since early yesterday morning, in which Officers Hurd and Excell had been sent to Steubenville to comb the city and Patrolman Pugh to East Liverpool, with other members of the force directing their attention to Wellsville.

Police Surgeon's Story.

Acting upon the advice of Wellsville authorities, Pittsburgh police are holding the body of Devie at Flannery's morgue, in Grant street, Pittsburgh, pending an examination, probably today or tomorrow, by Wellsville physicians, of the man's stomach and bruises which were seen on his head.

In the presence of Mayor Blackburn and a stenographer, the four youths, whose ages range from 24 to 27, were grilled at the home of the police chief, who has been ill.

"Rowley said that he and the three others—Dash, Carroll and McKinnon—met Devie Monday morning at 7 o'clock on Main street. Devie asked the young men where he could get some liquor, and Rowley asserted he could get it for him (Devie). The latter then gave Rowley a five-dollar bill and Rowley, after a short absence, came back with a quart of liquor. This he gave to Devie together with $1 in change. The men then went into the door leading from Main street up the flight of stairs and onto the third floor of the building, where rooms were vacant.

Robbed Man of $20, Claim.

"About half an hour later Devie was drunk. Rowley and McKinnon went through his clothing and took a $20 bill from his pocket. The $1 bill he got from the $5 with which he purchased the liquor was mysteriously

REFUND FARES UNTIL JAN. 1

The Fare Refunding association will refund street car and railroad fares to all out-of-town shoppers who visit here during the remainder of the month, it was announced today.

In former years, fares have been refunded during December only until Christmas, but this year the plan will be extended until New Year's day. The decision, it is believed, will be a stimulant to business during the lull which usually prevails between the two holidays.

LEGION ERECTS COMMUNITY TREE

The tree will stand until after New Year's day.

FRENCH, DRUSES SIGN TRUCE

All Political Prisoners Liberated Under Armistice.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—Armistice between the French and the Djebel Druse tribesmen has been signed by French high commissioner De Jouvenel, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Cairo today.

The report declares that under the terms of the armistice all political prisoners have been liberated.

Recent reports have indicated that while the French have registered numerous successes against the Druses, who have been in rebellion, that three have been no signs of a collapse on the part of the Druses. The tribesmen have shown an ability to suffer defeat and rise again.

Sultan Atrash, leader of the Djebel Druses, has declared that he would not make peace with the French on any terms short of evacuation of the French from Syria. He has demanded the establishment of an independent country, but has stated that he is willing to have the United States exercise a protectorate over Syria.

PARIS, Dec. 24.—The foreign office has not received confirmation of reports that High Commissioner De Jauvenal has signed an armistice with the Druses.

'GOD'S CHRISTMAS GREETING'--A YULETIDE SERMONETTE--BY THE REV. W. J. H. M'KNIGHT OF CHESTER

(Editor's Note—The following Yuletide sermonette, "God's Christmas Greeting," was written especially for the Review-Tribune by Rev. W. J. H. McKnight, pastor of the First United Presbyterian church of Chester.)

BY REV. W. J. McKNIGHT,

"God hath spoken unto us in His Son."—Hebrews 1:2.

A little six-year-old tiptoed softly up to the side of the crib where lay the home's latest arrival. Placing his lips down close to the little pink ear he whispered: "Now, baby brother, tell us all about God before you forget." No doubt many of us have felt moved to make the same plea as we have looked upon the tiny newcomer, have wondered what that little mind might reveal to us of the Infinite.

Laying hold then of that perfectly normal impulse of the human heart let us permit it this Christmas to carry us back almost two thousand years to bow before the manger in the stable at Bethlehem where we can receive an answer straight from God. The babe speaks to us primarily a message of love, a message of the Divine love that led the Father to give His only-begotten Son and that moved the Son to give up the glory that He had with the Father to offer Himself the sacrifice in our stead.

How fittingly it is all presented to us in the heart of a little babe that is filled with untold capacity to love where that love is permitted. How well also the tender form of the little infant draws forth from even the stony heart the noble emotion of love. That noble virtue of love which is the reigning spirit of Christmas could be personified no more perfectly than in the figure of the young Infant in Mary's arms. The innocent little features speak to us eloquently of God's holiness.

In all too brief a space of time there come into the human countenance the traces of sin and of the burdens thrown upon us because of sin, but in the guileless countenance before us God reminds us of His holiness and quickens within us the consciousness of our own sinfulness. Odd as it may seem, the Babe tells us of the power of Almighty God. From the date that the newborn child enters the home the same hand that shakes the toy in glee is the hand that moves the scepter of power. As he is made ruler of the home so the Christchild must be enthroned in our hearts.

The Christmas Greeting that comes straight from God to us in the person of His Son is: "There is born to you this day in the city of David a Saviour who is Christ the Lord."

Less Rain Noted on Northern Pacific Coast

Tacoma, Wash.—Old residents of that part of Washington and Oregon lying between the Cascade mountains and the Pacific ocean long have been declaring that cutting the dense timber that once covered the region is gradually changing the climate.

"It doesn't rain like it used to," the old-timers remark, recalling the days when they referred to one another as "webb-footers" and "moss backs."

And now comes L. C. Cover, government weather observer here, with figures that partly corroborate the old settlers.

His figures show there has been a steady decline in rainfall here during five-year periods since 1895. The average annual rainfall from 1895 to 1900 was 45.90 inches. From 1920 to 1925 it had fallen to 33.96.

A generation ago the average rainfall in this district was 45 inches a year, but the present average, based on all available figures of the past, has dropped to 40.72.

All-Star Cast Will Appear Here In 'No, No, Nanette'

FILM FEATURE AT AMERICAN

Lowell Sherman Has Stellar Role in "Satan in Sables."

"Satan in Sables," the Warner Brothers' classic of the screen starring Lowell Sherman, which opens today at the American theatre, brings a vividly dramatic story of the screen as well as a novel note of artistic elegance of setting.

Paris, the romantic, gay, picturesque, pre-war Paris, flush with wealth, art and amusement, is the locale of this extraordinary story written by Bradley King. Throughout the picture runs the contrast between the motly colorful life of the old Quartier Latin with its students, its sinister underworld hangers on, and the prodigal magnificance of the nobleman who pursued gayety without ever wearying of his quest.

Mr. Sherman appears to the best advantage of his cinema career in the role of Michael Lyev Yervedoff, a prince of the royal house of Russia. His characterization of the gentlemanly profligate, the dissolute but lovable spendthrift, is perfect, and deeply moving when he finds regeneration in tragedy and in love.

John Harron, as Paul, the young brother of the Prince, scores a distinct hit in his carefree youth and bitter disillusion. His unsophisticated manner make him an excellent foil for the suave poise of the star.

And Pauline Garon as Colette, gay, honest, big-eyed Collette who loved the prince and won his heart, is a delightful addition to this all-star cast.

Here is a dramatic and moving story, perfectly directed by James Flood, and with Lowell Sherman heading the list of prominent, players. You will find that "Satan in Sables" will hold you tense with interest from start to finish.

When "No, No, Nanette" was first produced in April of last year, for its first time on any stage, every critic predicted fame for this delightful musical play and a fortune for H. H. Franzee, its producer. After two preliminary weeks, "No, No, Nanette" went almost directly to the Harris theatre in Chicago; and how well its first audience forecast its destiny is told in its phenomenal Chicago record, which mounted to 12 months is told in its phenomenal Chicago record, which mounted to 12 months of solid capacity, nearly 500 performances, with the demand far from satisfied when previous bookings that could no longer be postponed carried this company to Boston and New York.

So, Mr. Frazee, wise showman that he is, and moved by the persistent claims of all other American cities, decided to satisfy this demand while "Nanette" was still a novelty and a sensation. Accordingly, some time ago he selected with great care three special companies which, in the public value of their leading players, fully rival their sister organization.

One of these companies closed its 27th week in Philadelphia; the second, after 25 capacity weeks in Los Angeles, is now in its 20th week in San Francisco; the third will be seen here. In New York the success of "No, No, Nanette" has reached the proportions of a furor; while in London and Australia seats must be secured months ahead.

The cast which will be seen at the Ceramic theatre Thursday, Dec. 31, includes such well-known and able exponents of song, dance and laughter, as John Hayms, Leila McIntyre, Eulalie Young, Roland Woodruff, Dorothy Newell, Floyd English, Helen Case, Mildred Joy, Janearl Johnson, Myrtle Miller and a dozen or more other principals of equal renown. The chorus an exceptionally interesting one, contains a gorgeous garden of girls. There are a round dozen song hits, with "I Want to Be Happy" and "Tea for Two" which have set the world "stepping" in the forefront of favor.

Norway's shipbiulding industry is depressed because the workers have refused to accept wage cuts which would bring cost of production down to the level of other European shipbuilding yards.

'STAGE STRUCK' AT CERAMIC

Gloria Swanson Stars in Allan Dwan Production.

In "Stage Struck," which is the film attraction at the Ceramic theatre today, tomorrow and Saturday, Gloria Swanson returns to the type of production that registered her first great popularity and which established her as one of the greatest character actresses of all time.

"Stage Struck," written especially for the star by Frank R. Adams, whose stories are read by millions in Cosmopolitan Magazine, tells a most wonderful and thoroughly logical story. It has been the dream of every young girl to grow up to be a great actress—to go on the stage.

Allan Dwan has taken this human theme and developed it into one of the greatest box office attractions of Miss Swanson's career. Nothing more delightfully appealing has ever been assigned this captivating star.

Judge for yourself; Gloria in a broad comedy as a waitress in a factory town restaurant on the Ohio river. She is smitten with a pancake artist who is fond of actresses. She is taking a correspondence course in acting. The picture opens with a gorgeous dream sequence, done in natural colors, has a series of side-splitting incidents in the restaurant and also some rich comedy stuff on one of the famous floating theatres of the Ohio river.

And it's a new kind of love story. Instead of the old stuff where the young man pursues the girl around, the girl pursues the man. Her idea of a great artist is a man who can toss flapjacks into the air and have them come down the other side up in the right place on the griddle. And his idea of a wonderful girl is an actress who wins the applause of the multitude.

Gloria mends his shirts and does his laundry, but he doesn't know it. When she shows up with the make-up on her face he bawls her out. When she tries to commit suicide he hands her another call-down. He has a "treat-em-rough" system, but he discovers in the end that he likes her better than anything or anybody else in the world.

The Children's Festival

It used to be customary in the Old World to appoint "boy bishops" for the Christmas holidays. Such a "bishop" used to rule London in Shakespeare's day, from December 6 to 28. This quaint ceremony lasted in Germany until very recently.

It was all play, of course. But it was recognition of the part children have always played, and always should play, in Christmas and in Christianity.

Christ loved children, and built His teaching around them. The day celebrated by Christendom as His birthday—which is also the birthday of the solar year, and so in a double sense the giver of light—is pre-eminently the children's festival.

How they do love it! They recognize it as theirs, and take possession of it, and give it their spirit, and put their mark all over it. It is the one holiday in the year for them, to be looked forward to with excitement and expectancy, and welcomed with joy, and spent in rapture, and remembered lovingly through the rest of the year.

The enjoyment of grown-ups is largely vicarious—as it should be in good Christian folk. Their chief role is giving. And in that, they find their Christmas satisfaction, as the youngsters find theirs mainly in receiving. For once in the year, the sophisticated and cynical grown-up really comes to feel that there is something after all in the Christian idea, "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

Where there are no children, there is no Christmas. The man or woman who has none to minister to on this day is driven to borrow them from relatives and friends, or go forth and seek them in the highways and byways.

The grown-ups enjoy it just to the extent that they enter into the frank, joyous, believing spirit of the children themselves. Around the hearth on Christmas morning, all are children together. And this in itself proves the validity of the Christian festival.

Get Your 1926 Auto License

If East Liverpool automobile owners expect to operate their motor cars on New Year's day in keeping with the law requiring up-to-the-minute observance of license regulations, Deputy Automobile Commissioner J. S. Hilbert and his aides will be kept on the jump during the next eight days, including today.

Although the time limit for use of the 1925 tag expires on December 31, shopping in licenses required by the Buckeye state for operation of automotive vehicles over public highways during the next 12 months has been slow. Less than 700 plates have been issued here, and any grammar school pupil will tell you subtraction proves that 5,100 of last year's car owners have failed to apply for the new tags.

Perhaps Santa Claus has drained the pocketbooks of some of the delinquents, but this is no excuse in the East Liverpool district courts, where persons who attempt to motor without the formality of attaching the 1925 plates to their cars will face prosecution. Warning to this effect has been given by the police.

Brown and white are the colors of the new style in automobile licenses, and fashion decrees that the old shades of cream and black are out of date when Father Time rings the bell on 1925. And while the cost of the new plates is reduced, there is more trouble in securing them, for car owners must produce a bill of sale as well as a tax receipt.

A hint to the wise is sufficient.

Colds At School

It is the season of colds, when "common colds" are commoner than ever, and more dangerous.

The worst breeding place of this ubiquitous disease is the schoolroom. Children with colds insist on broadcasting them, and children without colds are seldom careful to avoid snifflers and coughers. Many children catch cold at school over and over again, and then bring it home and distribute it among the rest of the family. So common is this procedure that thousands of mothers and fathers dread to see school begin in the fall, and particularly dread the winter months.

It isn't only the "common colds," either. Most of the children's diseases that spread so easily through a community begin with a cold. So there is never any telling what an apparently ordinary cold may be the harbinger of.

Parents should realize far more than they usually do what a serious offense it is against the community to let a child with a cold in the contagious stage go to school. Often the school authorities and teachers are astonishingly lax in the matter.

If every sniffling or coughing child were sent home, with orders to stay there until the cold was cured, the total loss of time for sickness in the schoolroom would be greatly diminished, and the community health would be greatly improved.

Now that Ireland and the Balkans are pacified, some of the other conscientious scrappers will soon feel obliged to start something.

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—Rialto producers are looking for an American Michael Arlen to sprinkle a little glamour on the drama. Arlen took ordinary hokum and dressed it up in Mayfair clothes. He put jade buttons on the weskit of a Soho sap, gave him a drawl and he became a favorite of the boudoirs.

He took stuff of the servants hall below stairs and fitted it to the mellow incandescence of the drawing room. A Strand trollop touched by Arlen magic was transported from pavement promenades to a mauve colored Daimler and seemed quite thus and thus.

A Savoy drink cadger with over-Niagara mustache and soiled spats was glossed to the opulence of a Sir Soandso, Bart., and the public in perfidious old Albion and American gulped it down and smasked lips for more. Arlen would be the last to deny the velvet-sheathed bunk.

He made the gutter effloresce. But he thought of it first, and as the originator is entitled to rewards that are his. The American drama-makers have dramatized the bedrooms but with too much stark reality. They have neglected tony backgrounds and swank names.

"Getting Gertie's Garter," was of the same stuff as "These Charming People," but it was not whipped up to the same romantic importance. Arlen has proved you can Maggie McSwatt, a name like Iris, floss up her phrases, and the gallery and orchestra will sit enthralled.

The worst rotter, so long as his lapel blooms with a rose and he is able to say "How extraw-dineery!" takes on the significance of a hot figure in a world of fashionables. Arlen is deft with the trick of spreading witchery throughout his scenes.

He knows the appeal of flowery couches, decolette ladies, music, lustre, jewels and singing bulbuls. Most folk face so much reality they tingle to the artificial, and the American playwright who can do with Park Avenue what Arlen did with Mayfair is not going to worry about the rent for several years.

The other night I dined in a cafe that was to be padlocked next morning for a year. Somehow I could think only of the waiters—all rather old men suffering from the broken arched misery of their calling. They had been serving regular customers for years. Many legal violations may have been forced upon them but after all they had to live. They went about their work as pleasantly as ever, although I have no doubt their hearts were heavy. As one who has lost many jobs, I know of nothing quite so depressing. Illness does not bring the same despair.

"What do you expect to do after they close here?" I asked my waiter.

"Begin a long hunt for a job, I suppose," he replied.

Perhaps sympathy for the man losing a job is wasted. Save through drink, I have never known a man to lose a job who did not land a better one. I have watched this phenomena for years, but is is perhaps scant cheer for the man who has just lost his job.

Motorcycle cops have thrown the fear of the law and traffic court justice into the hearts of Central Park motor speeders. Statistics show it is one of the safest places in the city for motoring. Motor cops can hide in the bushes and picked up a speeder before he has gone a city block. As a result, park traffic has a steady and rather monotonous flow. Sometimes in the early morning a joy rider is ditched against a tree, but during the day the park becomes the heaven for those who enjoy a slow pace.

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

New Grade Crossing Guard.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—From Boston comes word of a new device to guard grade crossings and put an end to or minimize the number of accidents in which motor vehicles dispute the right of way with railway trains, with appalling results in annual fatalities. William H. Banks, a well known manufacturer of the Hub, is the inventor.

That Mr. Banks is actuated wholly by public spirited motives in bringing his invention to the attention of the public is attested by his statement that he is seeking neither recognition nor profit through it, and, moreover, is ready to pay for the installation of an experimental guard that will demonstrate whether or not it makes good his claim for it.

Railroad officials and highway commissioners whose attention has been called to the device have indicated their interest in it, but have not gone so far as to give it a try-out. Mr. Banks is now preparing to submit his idea to Secretary Herbert Hoover and the committee on highway safety which has been organized as one of the collateral activities of the department of commerce.

The new guard is based on somewhat the same principle as the letter S concrete bridges that feature some of the highways of the United States, notably in Ohio. It is utterly impossible to negotiate these bridges at high speed. The motorist must slow down or invite certain disaster. The catastrophe can not be averted by "taking a chance" of beating anything or anybody to the point of danger.

Consequently the driver slows down, of if he does not, shortly thereafter one of those sinister little white monuments marks the spot of his folly and other motorists profit by his experience.

The underlying idea is that the only effective way of combatting the grade crossing menace is to recognize and deal with the psychology of the average driver of an automobile or truck. Students of the problem say that grade crossing tenders with their flags, and crossing warnings or bells or lowering gates, excite a gambling spirit in many drivers, inspiring them to take a chance on the mere possibility of getting by with it, and that the only way to deal with all such is to give them 100 per cent opposition.

The Compulsion Treatment.

Compulsion is the only treatment for drivers of this type, it is asserted. They will not take chances with a stone wall, and that, in effect, is what Mr. Banks claims his guard to be. It is not a stone wall because it is constructed of concrete, but he says it will have all the menace of one and will be as conspicuous either by daylighe or by headlight. It will compel the driver to reduce speed to a point where his machine will be under perfect control.

Instead of making the approach and crossing of a railroad in the form of a letter S, Mr. Banks erects concrete wals 20 to 24 inches in height from a point 85 feet from the railroad right of way. At this point the walls flare out on either side to a width fully encompassing the roadbed of the highway. Then they curve gently in, and then out, forming an oval 43 feet in diameter, with its center 43 feet from the railroad right of way, and then the walls curve in again until they mark the width of the ordinary roadbed, flaring out slightly at the right of way. In the center of the large oval is what is in effect an oval island formed by similar concrete walls curving in the same arc as the outer walls, but with a 9-foot opening in the center of the roadway at either end. The opening at the end farthest from the railroad track is guarded by a gate, or by a chain on flexible posts.

Thus the driver of an automobile must slow down to pass through the guard by making the circle to the right, or, if he elects to make passage straight through the small island in the center of the large oval, he must stop to open the gate, or slow down to force down the chain on the flexible posts. The possibility of making the passage straight through the guard insures that it will not be an obstruction to the passage of long bodies, such as trucks loaded with lumber or timbers.

The motorists attempting to make passage through this guard for the first time, it is pointed out, sees the approaches and their outposts with the usual markings. He observes the lights, signals, and other warnings which inform him of his proximity to a railroad crossing, and the sight of the guard itself causes him to halt or come to a very slow speed. Whatever dare devil spirit he may have had will be checked, or if he is merely proceeding carelessly or absent-mindedly he will be compelled to thing of his situation and act accordingly.

No Other Practical Way.

"I have devoted much time and thought to the matter and have come to the conclusion that there is no other practical way of solving the grade crossing problem,' says Mr. Banks. "I have studied various mechanical means of guarding crossings and am convinced that all such are either impracticable or untrustworthy. If the methods now being used are ineffective—and the amazing frequency of fatal accidents certainly proves that they are—what then? Shall we try something else, or shall we go on with the killings?

"My guard is intended for isolated crossings rather than for those on congested thoroughfares. In studying crossings with heavy traffic I find little inclination on the part of drivers to take chances. They accept the situation and govern themselves accordingly. But on free thoroughfares they pay little or no heed to signs, bells, and the like, maintaining the same speed as though no crossing was at hand—indeed, in many instances, as if they were wholly unconscious of their surroundings.

The inventor points out further that the absent-minded drivers, as well as the reckless and careless, must be safeguarded, and that for them a clear view of a railroad crossing and a wide, straight highway approaching it are little protection. They must be restrained. Mechanical and human guards are ineffectual and both are prohibitive in the expense of maintenance. Therefore, he argues, a prohibitive in the expense of maintenance. Therefore, he argues, a part of the roadway must be constructed, as planned in his scheme, so that drivers must reduce their speed and thereby more closely note their surroundings.

"When they do that the battle is won," continues Mr. Banks. "Whether we like constricted sections in highways or not, a means to compel the application of brakes by those who should but will not do so of their oown free willl, must be devised. This can not be done by any system of warning but must be accomplished through a positive check, which is the fundamental principle of the guard I have devised."

The inventor does not go into the cost of his guard, but experts say that it would not be prohibitive if it were constructed at the same time the highway is being paved or built. There would be practically no maintenance cost.

Any county, city, or state has the permission of Mr. Banks to adopt and use hsi grade crossing guard.

Ralph De Palma, the famous racing driver, says: "I am convinced that the motorist who figures in a grade crossing accident seldom if ever, has a defense. He is blind to gates and watchmen and flashing red lights, deaf to bells and whistles. He is an enigma, a charter member of the order of the Utter Dam Fool."

CORONER HOLDS INQUEST HERE

Coroner George A. Arner conducted an inquest late yesterday afternoon into the death of Luther Burris, 36, mill worker, who ended his life by shooting himself with a shot gun in his home, 214 Litten street.

Later in the evening an autopsy was held by Drs. G. E. Lewis, J. L. Fyle and C. A. Shafer. Examination of the body disclosed that Burris, who, it is said, was despondent as a result of domestic troubles, placed the gun in his mouth and used the toes of his uncovered right foot to pull the trigger. The physicians found only one small concussion caused by the discharge of the gun.

The body is at the Arner funeral home where it is being held pending the arrival of relatives who reside near Fairmont and who are expected to reach here this afternoon.

On The Birth
Of a New Dawn

Before crossing the dividing line that marks the passing of a short period in our lives, we pause to think a moment.

The year just ending held a great deal for us. We feel we have grown broader in vision and stronger in spirit, and much, much richer in friends. And when we think of all the good this year brought to our city, we grow humble indeed.

Not of material gains that we are thinking, but rather of something many, many times more precious—the wonderful great friendship that you have given to each other and to us so freely.

Success measured in dollars or earthly possessions means but little. Long, long ago we found that out for ourselves—and everyone must find out for himself or else he will never know. That in the sum total of life it is the number of friends we make and hold that add to our happiness.

The Stein Store has become a near and dear part of this growing humming community; that you talk to each other of us with pride; that you look to us to participate in all public events, great or small. That we are privileged to be one of you. That you truly feel that in the busy hum of life we COUNT, makes us happy beyond expression.

Long years ago it became the super-ambition of Jacob Stein that this store become an institution of SERVICE—and thus far we have succeeded in a moderate way through our never ceasing efforts.

And with this thought uppermost in our minds we confidently and with stout hearts face the future before us, as it is, a vista clean and untrammelled, radiant with promise, ours to do with as we will.

From life's deep well we shall take out as much as we put into it. It is us who shape our own destinies. And, henceforth, spurred by past achievements we go forth by further improving our ways, by becoming more considerate, of more help and of more service to our fellow men.

So with the deepest and most sincere feeling we pass the old greeting:

A Merry Christmas
and
A Happy New Year

Signed,
JACOB STEIN.

TURKEY TREAT AT HOSPITAL

Christmas Spirit Also Prevails in City and County Jails.

Patients at the City hospital are to be treated to turkey, plum pudding and all the trimmings of a real Christmas dinner tomorrow.

"We are planning to make Christmas Day just as merry as possible for those who cannot be at home with their loved ones," Miss Bertha Miller, hospital superintendent, said this morning.

Turkey for the dinner was furnished by the Buckeye City Ice and Products company. There will be nuts, oranges, candy and other delicacies for all those whose illness is not of a serious nature. Theh ospital population tomorrow will be between 35 and 40.

Interior of the hospital has been decorated in keeping with the Yuletide season, wreaths, tissue paper bells and similar decorations being used.

Chief of Police McDermott today announced that all prisoners in the city jail, except those charged with a serious offense, will be liberated either Christmas eve or Christmas morning in order to permit them to spend the day with friends. No special menu will be furnished those who might be in jail at noon unless it is sent by friends.

Something special in the line of "eats" is also to be handed out to prisoners in the county jail, but it won't be turkey, Mrs. George Wright, matron at the county jail, stated.

The meal will consist of hot roast pork and apple sauce. Friends of the prisoners furnished turkey for Thanksgiving and the same menu may prevail for New Year's day. Sheriff George Wright will pass out the "smokes" as his Christmas gift to those behind the cold walls of the county jail.

Three Firemen Die

BOSTON, Dec. 24.—Fifteen firemen were overcome early today during a four-alarm $65,000 fire which threatened to wipe out Boston's market district. The fire swept the six-story block where it originated.

James Callahan and Timothy Sullivan, two other firemen, fell exhausted in the building. Twelve others were carried from the blazing building into the open air.

A hero of the fire was Ralph Melzard, gas company employe. Braving fire, smoke and water, Melzard rushed through the building disconnecting the gas.

three or four millions and moves farther up Fifth avenue.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt inherited another Vanderbilt house, just above Mrs. White's. She sold that for seven and one-half millions to Mr. Heckscher, who will build a 42-story hotel on the site. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt also moves farther up Fifth avenue.

You can't tell what is going to happen when you buy a piece of land in America. Neither William H. Vanderbilt nor Cornelius Vanderbilt, now together in heaven, imagined that the land they bought for a trifle would more than pay for the palaces they put upon it.

Get land in America, take care of it, and rightly chosen, it will take care of you.

HOLY YEAR COMES TO END TODAY

ROME, Dec. 24.—Holy year came to its traditional and official end today with the walling up of the sacred doors at St. Peter's and the patriarchal basilicas of St. John Lateran, St. Mary Major and St. Paul.

With the pope officiating in person at St. Peter's, the services were carried through with a symbolism and a pageantry which brought Catholic ceremonial near its apogee. The ritual of building up the holy doorway, which American pilgrims will remember as the one farthest to the right as St. Peter's, is approached from the plaza, was the distinctive feature of the ceremonies marking the concluding phase of the jubilee year.

The pope descended from the sedia gestatoria before the confessio where he knelt in prayer before the tomb of St. Peter. In the confessio with its 89 ever-burning lights not far from the spot where the pontiff prayed could be discerned the stately outline of another Pius—Pius VI, also kneeling, as immortalized by Antonio Canova in one of the world's great pieces of sculpture.

And today's ceremonial had another association with Pope Pius VI. for his successor, Pius XI, wore his predecessor's ring, presented to him this year by the Catholic Daughters of America. The ring was purchased by the American Catholic ladies from a family in Naples and the pope in writing his thanks to his children in the United States, told them he would wear the ring at this morning's exercises.

Four Held in Death

"Rowley, McKinnon, Dash and Carroll ran out to catch a car which was due, but missed the car and then went to Patterson's restaurant, where they had lunch. Later they boarded a westbound interurban street car and went to Steubenville."

According to Chief Fultz, Rowley explained that McKinnon got the $20 bill out of Devie's pocket and he gave it to Rowley. The bill, it is said, was subsequently "changed," and according to the story told the chief, was split between the pair.

Feit Effects of Liquor.

Carroll, McCinnon and Dash also were questioned, and, according to Chief Fultz, corroborated Rowley's purported confession. Each of the quartet, it is said, asserted that he felt the effects of the liquor they drank, although, in the opinion of police, they probably did not take the quantity that Devie did. They said that they were hardly able to eat and that their legs were affected, the police chief declared.

Folowing the questioning, the four youths were taken to the city jail where they were locked up.

According to police, the investigation, which got under way several hours after Devie's body had been discovered by Earl Densmore, of Wellsville, received its first impetus when residents near 1321 Main street said they saw the four men running for a car. One of the quartet was recognized and this led, susbequently, to establishing the identity of the others.

THREE KILLED IN RAIL WRECK

Ex-secretary of War Weeks Shaken up in Crash.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Dec. 24.—Ex-Secretary of War John W. Weeks, was slightly shaken up today in a head on collision between the West Indian limited and the Havana special on the Atlantic Coast line railroad, near Monks Corner, South Carolina.

Weeks, accompanied by Mrs. Weeks, was returning home from a trip to South America. They were in the last car of the northbound train.

At least three men were dead, one missing, and several members of the crew injured.

The dead:

ENGINEER HERBERT T. PARRISH. of Florence, S. C.

ENGINEER J. E. CUMMINGS of Savannah, Ga.

FIREMAN C. BAXTER, of Florence, S. C.

A negro fireman named Williams is missing, and is believed to be buried beneath wreckage at the bottom of an embankment, according to telephone advices to Atlantic Coast Line headquarters in Charleston.

A relief train with doctors and nurses aboard has been dispatched from Charleston to the scene of the wreck.

The two tourist trains were loaded with holiday travelers. The passengers were badly shaken up and frightened.

The wreck was said to have been caused by failure of both engineers to observe red light stop signals placed at the beginning of a portion of single track.

Solons Hold Up Ordinance to Purchase Traffic Lights

Halt Action After Measure Transferring $2,500 to General Fund is Placed Upon First Reading.

An ordinance transferring $2,500 from the general fund to the safety fund to purchase "additional traffic lights and pay current bills for the balance of the present year," was held up by the city solons last evening, after being placed upon first reading, pending an investigation of an appropriation which is said to have been made several months ago for this purpose.

Councilmen Kerr, Farrall and Larcombe charged that the city was now being asked to pay a bill for approximately $800 for which money had been appropriated last June. It was explained that $1,000 of the $2,500 transfer, authorized last summer, was to meet the cost of the three street lights installed several months ago, and, according to Auditor McGraw, about $800 is needed to pay an outstanding bill for street lights.

Solon Farrall was the first to offer an objection to the measure, asserting that he was under the impression that money for the first three lights had been provided several months ago.

"The mayor asked us to appropriate $1,800 for the lights and the patrol, but we voted the safety department $2,500 for these improvements,' said Larcombe. "There is about $700 which is unaccounted for and I would like to know where it went."

Seek Explanation.

The ordinance was placed on first reading and passed without a dissenting vote. Clerk Shone produced his minutes and the ordinance, approved last June, providing for the transfer of money to the safety department for traffic lights.

"I am not opposed to installing additional lights but I would like to know where the money went that we originally provided," said Farrall.

Kerr also stated that he was in favor of placing further lights but would like to be informed about the money which already had been set aside for this purpose. "I will vote in favor of transferring enough money to buy the new lights but am opposed to making a transfer of $2,500 to pay an outstanding bill for the first three lights which we installed here," he said.

Councilman Chambers asserted that he did not believe that the money was spent illegally but that due to a delay in submitting a bill for the lights the money had probably been spent for some other purpose.

"Money that is set aside for one purpose cannot be legally spent for another purpose," retorted Farrall. "The state examiner is liable to call our attention to this when he inspects the auditor's books."

Council then, by a unanimous vote, decided to defer further consideration of the ordinance until the auditor is questioned regarding the first appropriation. An adjourned session will be held ne t Tuesday evening.

Pass Cap Ordinances.

A committee of business men from the Fourth and Market street district appeared before the solons in behalf of the new traffic lights, but failed to state their mission at the meeting. One of the two new lights will, in all probability, be placed at the corner of Fourth and Market streets, according to the plan of Chief of Police McDermott.

An ordinance, providing for the furnishing of caps and equipment for the members of the police department, was passed on third and final reading. Councilman Farrall alone opposed the legislation on final reading. Another ordinance, authorizing the purchase of caps for members of the fire department, introduced by Farrall and Kerr, was passed on three readings without a dissenting vote.

Another ordinance, amending that section of the traffic ordinance which makes Washington street, between Fourth and Fifth, a one-way traffic, was passed on three readings by a unanimous vote.

Councilman Larcombe opposed the change, but would not vote against the amendment. He charged that the interesection at Fifth and Washington street was one of the most dangerous in the business district inasmuch as street cars traversed all intersecting streets, while at Broadway, which is a much wider street than Washington, there was no tracks south of Fifth. The police department plans to prohibit left turns at the corner of Fifth street and Broadway as soon as Washington street is opened to two-way traffic. That part of the street between Fifth and Sixth streets remains open for north bound traffic only.

Fix Director's Bond.

An ordinance, fixing the bond of the service-safety director, who assumes office early in January, at $6,000, was passed on three readings. The ordinance was declared to be an emergency measure.

Councilman Kerr made a report on the cost of the Mulberry street culvert, built recently by the street department. The total cost was $628.77.

"The city saved about $500 on this job, enough to buy a concrete mixer," Kerr said. "The lowest estimate that we had was between $1,000 and $1,100. It might be well to thing over this saving on our street work.

Six Bandits Shoot One Man, Slug Aide And Seize $50,000

MOLLENAUER, Pa., Dec. 24.—Opening fire as they approached, six masked bandits today held up a party of five messengers of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal company and escaped with a Christmas payroll of $50,000.

The holdup, termed by police the most daring in Allegheny county in years, occurred a few miles outside of Pittsburgh, near the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal company's mine No. 2, between Mollenauer and Castle Shannon.

Real Christmas Assured in Hocking Valley Coal Fields

ATHENS, O., Dec. 24.—There will be a real Christmas in the Hocking Valley coal fields tomorrow.

And, for the little tots, Santa Claus will bring a full pack down the chimney for the first time in years.

Full plates and stockings were made possible for the humble miners' cottages when "pay day" was moved up 48 hours. Union miners usually draw their wages on the tenth and twenty-fifth of the month.

However, the added advantage of spending money for the Yuletide will not bring an elaborate display or extravagance to the "Valley." Relief workers say Christmas fare will be plain, although substantial and plentiful.

29,000 Telephone Calls Here Daily During Yule Season

East Liverpool's telephone calls have increased from 25,000 to 29,000 daily during the Christmas shopping season, according to Frank Swaney, commercial manager of the East Liverpool office of the Ohio Bell Telephone company. This represents an increase of approximately 15 per cent over the average for autumn.

Practically all of the extra calls during the week preceding and the week following the holiday, according to Swaney, originate in the homes and a large number are for department stores. Thousands of calls are made to extend Christmas and New Year's wishes.

Additional operators are employed to take care of the increased work. The surplus force is recruited from the ranks of former telephone operators, who have married or retired from service for other reasons.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—Speculative interest was concentrated in American Can, old and new stocks, in the early trading today, in view of the flood of market rumors that the "insiders in Can" would carry out their program of pushing the stock to 300 "before the end of the year." The stock advanced quickly to 290¼ for a new 8 point gain in the first period, where a large volume of selling was encountered. The new stock, admitted to trading today, sold at 48¾, compared with the introductory price of 42 in the curb market last week.

Pacific Oil continued as the spectacular leader of the petroleum stocks, advancing nearly 3 points to a new high at 67¼ in the first half hour in unusually heavy trading. Most of the Standard and independent oils in all markets sold at slightly higher prices.

With a three-day holiday looming for the stock markets and most of the commodity markets after the close today, shorts in many of the speculative industrial and specialty stocks were unusually active in covering up their outstanding contracts, and it was estimated in the financial district that more than half of today's transactions were for short account. Call money rates were unchanged at 6 per cent, with loans holding over until Monday.

SPORTSMEN TO HAVE BIG YEAR

Distribution of Game Big Item on 1926 Card.

Randall Hamilton of Lisbon, president of Columbiana's Izaak Walton league, has been advised by D. O. Thompson, chief of the state disvision of fish and game, that it is the intention of the department to make 1926 the banner year for all sportsmen in Ohio who "love to hunt and fish."

"The department contemplates propagating from 8,600 to 10,000 rabbits that they may be distributed at the proper time in different counties where there has been a scarcity of rabbits in the past," Mr. Hamilton has been advised by Mr. Thompson.

"We also are now operating two large pheasant farms and are expecting to raise during the coming year 25,000 young pheasants which will be distributed proportionately in each of the 88 counties in Ohio.

"The department contemplates building two new fish hatcheries in addition to the four that were started in 1925. Extensive improvements have been started on our eight inland hatcheries, and each hatchery will be so improved that we may increase the propagation of fish in 1926.

"It is the department's ambition to make Ohio one of the greatest states in the union for the sportsmen, and we are asking all sportsmen to cooperate with the department in order that we may reach this goal."

Construction of the fish hatchery in Hanover township at Guilford is expected to be under way during the cominy year, according to advices Mr. Hamilton has received from Columbus. Money is now available for the purchase of the 400 odd acres for the new state park in this county.

School Grid Players Given Gold Emblems

Miniature Footballs Presented to 19 Letter Men by Country Club Sports Committee in Recognition of Team's Title Achievement.

Solid gold footballs, miniature replicas of the pigskin which they toted to a championship this year over Columbiana county scholastic elevens, were awarded to 19 letter men of the high school grid team by the sports committee of the East Liverpool Country club at special Christmas exercises yesterday afternoon in the high school auditorium.

In recognition of their achievement on the gridirons of the county during hte season which recently closed, the country club sports committee presented the gold emblems as tangible evidence of a successful season under the guidance of Coach O. V. Boone.

The presentation was made by W. E. Wells, Jr., former East Liverpool high school athlete and gridiron star at Bethany college. Wells is chairman of the country club sports committee. He lauded the efforts of the Blue and White in their climb to season's honors and voiced the wish of the club as a whole that there be many more seasons like it.

In addition, gold footballs were presented to Coach O. V. Boone and Assistant Coach George Kidder, and the two managers, Dawson and Breakstone.

Football letters were also awarded during the exercises. In connection with the presentations of the "L" to each of the men who qualified during the recent campaign, Assistant Coach Kidder handed out certificates denoting that the recipient had merited the honor awarded him by his performance on the gridiron during 1925.

Injured Grid Star Looking Forward to Next Year's Games

Apparently fit as the proverbial fiddle, with the exception of a slight limp in the leg which he injured last season at Patterson Field, Ralph Schaffer, one of the big cogs in Coach Boone's Blue and White grid machine preceding the unfortunate occurrence, yesterday afternoon stepped up to the platform to receive his football letter and miniature gold football.

Schaffer will be able to play football next year, if he so desires, physicians have informed Coach Boone.

And no less a person than the grid star himself asserts emphatically that he's going to play.

It was at first feared that Schaffer would be out of the game for all time and that the injury would visibly affect the use of his leg But constant care and skillful surgery have apparently worked a miracle in restoring to the youth the use of the member.

SCHAEFER SET FOR RETURN MATCH

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—Jake Schaefer, who recently lost the world's 18.2 balk line billiard title to Edouard Horemans, of Belgium, by five points, will leave today for Chicago where, beginning January 4, he will play Horemans a return match of 1,500 points for the championship. Present plans call for the ex-champion to make the trip to Chicago by automobile with frequent stops en route for practice.

The return match was made possible by Schaefer's threat to withdraw in the middle of the first one, unless Horemans granted him another chance within 30 days in case the Belgian won. A decision rendered against Schaefer by Referee Lewis was the cause of this unusual demand. The belief held here is that Schaefer will enter the second match a favorite.

Rosenblums Beat Bruins.

CHICAGO, Dec. 24.—The Chicago Bruins today were the deposed leaders of the American professional basketball league, following their 41 to 34 defeat at the hands of the Cleveland Rosenblums here last night. Play was closed and distance shots featured.

POLISHES OFF EASTERN BOXER IN 6-ROUNDER

McTigue Given Decision Over Tiger Flowers.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—New York, long a prey to a sardonic suspicion that Frankie Genaro was really the greatest flyweight in the world, read its answer in the stars last night. One of them was Fidel La Barba, of Los Angeles. Lew Perfetti, his opponent in the real feature bout of the annual Christmas fund show, saw the others.

This community admits no official recognition of La Barba as champion flyweight of the world because the young man is under the local age limit but the customers can and did draw their own conclusions. After watching Fidel give Perfetti, a bantamweight, a shellacking in six rounds, they knew beyond the peradventure of a doubt that La Barba had beaten Genaro on the plumb-bob level.

On what he uncovered last night, he is one of the greatest champions of the day and age, better than Pancho Villa and comparable with Jimmy Wilde, Johnny Coulon, Jimmy Barry and other immortals who held the title before him.

It was the night before Christmas eve and Santa Claus rode into town on a boxing glove, the gate having been estimated at around $50,000, on which the fighters cut fifty-fifty.

Approve His Title.

The glove held a present of four fingers and a thumb and Perfetti got all of them before the end of the sixth round, which he was fortunate to survive. He started like a winner, at that. He took the first two rounds, scoring a short knockdown with a left hook to the jaw in the opener. But after the second, he took a lot of other things and most of them on the jaw.

And, lest we forget, the New York commission at least gave sotto voce recognition of La Barba's title.

"Shall I introduce him as the champion." Joe Humphries asked James F. Farley, commission chairman, gefore the bout.

"That's what he is, isn't he?" was the reply, and it was so ordered.

Mr. Humphries was in great voice and gained a clean cut decision in the Mike McTigue-Tiger Flowers bout, the tacit but undeserved headliner of the show.

Just what a former veteran may be must remain something of a mystery but if McTigue is it, the writer must advocate that all remaining survivors of the type be hunted down and thrown out the window.

Flowers Forces Fighting.

It being the season of universal gifts, the officials allowed that McTigue had earned the decision over Flowers at the end of ten rounds. It was one of those verdicts that they pull out of the hat with the bowl of goldfish. McTigue only gained one distinction. He didn't make an error. He caught everything.

Flowers forced the fighting, of necessity, landed three blows to one and messed up Michael in general. The latter had the colored man in a bad way several times with hard right uppercuts but didn't seem to care to do much about it.

He could have absorbed a valuable lesson in the matter of developing a fighting heart had he watched La Bara in the preceeding bout. Fidel went into the third round a well outscored champion and some of the premature pall bearers in the gallery had begun to make caustic remarks. But, apparently, they hadn't seen the real La Bara emerge from under his wraps.

La Barba Has Everything.

Vastly encouraged, our young man went crazy in the second and hooked Fidel about like an amateur, the latter having no adequate reply to the kangaroo style of his opponent. Perfetti also jumped high in the air at the outset of the next round, but he didn't forget to come down. A left to the jaw and body reminded him.

The body punch, in fact, just about wound up the jumping competition for the evening. Badly hurt, Perfetti was driven into a corner and took a thoroughgoing beating. Later, a left to the jaw staggered him.

The fourth was slow but went to La Barba by a shade, while the fifth was fast and went the same way, Fidel making a mess out of his man with a lefts and rights to every spot the law allowed. He did the same in the sixth, almost dropping Lew with a left to the chin and needing only another clean punch to finish it when the bell rang.

La Barba proved he had everything —speed, boxing skill, the punch, tireless aggressiveness and the ability to laugh off a punch. He might have had more but there was nothing else.

Smith is Recovering

PHILADELPHIA.—Andy Smith, head football coach at the University of California, confined at the University hospital with pneumonia, was reported out of danger today. He has been resting easily and his complete recovery is expected.

Results of Gotham's Christmas Fights

At New York—Mike McTigue, New York, got the decision over Tiger Flowers, Atlanta, Ga., ten rounds. Fidel La Barba, Los Angeles, got the decision over Lew Perfetti, New York, six rounds. George Godfrey, Philadelphia, got he decision over Martin Burke, New Orleans, ten rounds. Ernie Jarvis, England, and Corporal Izzy Schwartz, New York, fought a draw, ten rounds.

NEW YORK.—Against the protest of several affiliated clubs the A. A. U. announced it will insist upon handling the schedules and the financial affairs of all the foreign athletes who come here this winter. The Millrose A. A of New York and the Illinois A. C. of Chicago are squabbling about the first appearance of several stars who are now on their way here.

Bid for Hudkins Bout.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 24.—Promoters were bidding today for a bout between Ace Hudkins, Nebraska, lightweight, and holder of the Pacific coast title, and Lou Paluso, Salt Lake City boxer, following Paluso's victory here last night after ten rounds of hard milling over Tommy O'Brien, New Yorker.

FRACTIONAL RACES TABOO

Association Rules to Cut Them Off Fair Programs.

At a meeting of the North East Ohio Fair Circuit held at Youngstown, a resolution was adopted opposing fractional mile races during the fair season next fall, and this will be presented at a meeting of the Ohio Fair association which will convene for three days at the Neil house, Columbus, Jan. 12-14. During the last few years some of the fair boards in this association have been featuring fractional mile events which have not proved satisfactorily, either to race horse owners, the public or the fair managers. An effort is to be made to have the Ohio Fair association adopt a similar resolution, and should this happen, then all fractional mile races during the next Ohio season will be eliminated from the cards.

Fairs for the next season as announced by the North Eastern Ohio association are as follows:

Ashtabula county at Jefferson, Aug. 17-20.

Trumbull county at Warren, Aug. 30-31, Sept. 1.

Mahoning county at Canfield Sept. 4-6.

Columbiana county at Lisbon, Sept. 14-15-16.

East Palestine, Independent, Sept. 7-9.

Kinsman, Independent, Aug. 24-26.

The association has decided that the race card for the coming season will consist of three events daily such as the 2:24, 2:19 and 2:15 trot and 2:25, 2:19 and 2:12 or free-for-all pace.

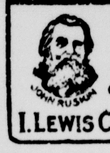

An entrance fee of $10 will be charged by all fair boards during the coming season for every horse entered with no deductions or other allowances.

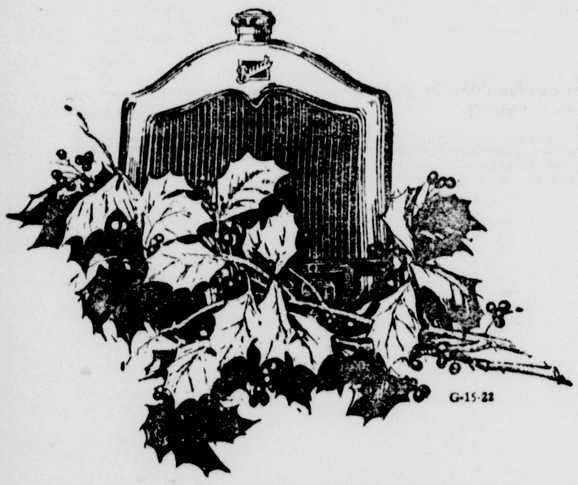

It has also been determined that the name of the horse and the driver for every race must be filed with the secretary of the fair association at or before 6 o'clock the evening previous to the day the horse is to race.

For the sixth term, O. R. Beckwith of Ashtabula has been elected president of the North Eastern Ohio Fair Circuit and Harry E. Marsden of Lisbon, secretary.

World's Richest Race

NEW YORK.—The Futurity of 1926 is expected to be the richest race in the world and probably will carry a gross value of more than $100,000, according to calculations by Victor L. Schaumberg, racing secretary at Belmont Park, who announced yesterday that nominations for the classic will close at the offices of the Westchester Racing association on Jan. 6, 1926. More than 1,800 nominations are expected for the Futurity, a record number.

THREE KINGS BOW TO LONE QUEEN

IN REVIEW OF 1925 TENNIS ACTIVITIES

By NORMAN E. BROWN.

Three kings usually make a hard hand to beat, but I believe that the successes of Miss Helen Wills, queen of American tennis, in 1925, far exceed those of the three kings, Bill Tilden, Bill Johnston and Vincent Richards.

Miss Wills started off the major tournament season with her invasion of England in quest of the Wimbledon title, emblematic of the world's tennis championship. Unused to foreign playing conditions she fell before the brilliant playing of Kathleen McKane, England's highest ranking player.

Returning to this country, Miss Wills relished the prospect of meeting Miss McKane and her British sisters again in the Wightman trophy matches which were staged in August. While America failed to turn back the British invaders Miss Wills' play was the spectacular event of the matches. Meeting Miss McKane again she defeated the British maid 6-1, 1-6, 9-7.

However, even the closest admirers of Miss Wills feared for her national title, held for two years, when Miss Elizabeth Ryan, American player returning to this country after 13 years in European play, defeated the California maid in the Seabright tourney.

Both Miss McKane and Miss Ryan were entered in the National tourney, as also was Miss Joan Fry, 18-year-old miss, given second ranking in British tennis.

Miss McKane Defeats Miss Ryan.

Unfortunately Miss Wills did not get to meet both Miss McKane and Miss Ryan. The latter rivals met, however, in the earlier rounds, and Miss McKane showed her superiority over the veteran star.

Miss Wills, in an earlier round, defeated Mrs. May Sutton Bundy. But Miss Fry's victory over Mrs. Bundy was equally impressive. Miss Wills then met Miss Fry and in decisive manner turned back the younger challenger.

The semi finals, however, found Miss McKane paired with Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, seven times national champ, and Miss Wills facing Eleanor Goss.

Miss McKane defeated the Norwegian miss two out of three sets, while Miss Wills trounced Miss Goss.

Then in the finals the two young stars—the best that England and America boast—met and fought it out, Miss Wills winning 3-6, 6-0, 6-2.

Truly a wonderful showing for a girl of Miss Wills' age and comparatively short tournament experience despite the fact that she has now ruled the U. S. courts three years.

Tilden Still Tilden.

With Tilden in the men's ranks it was different. The public has come to believe Tilden can go on forever in tennis.

He proved that in the national singles, in winning that tourney the sixth consecutive time. And he proved it in turning back Jean Borotra, dashing driver of the French team, in the Davis cup challenge round to help America retain the cup.

Bill Johnston was a more spectacular figure in some ways.

Faced with the prospect of being omitted from the Davis cup singles consideration, Johnston agreed to meet Vincent Richards, his rival, in a test match. His victory in five sets did not satisfy the tourney officials so a second trial match was arranged. In this Johnston proved his superiority by defeating Richards in three straight sets, 6-3, 6-4, 7-5.

As a result of these tests Richards was paired with Williams in the doubles and Johnston and Tilden met Rene Lacoste and Borotra in the singles. Victories in the first two singles matches and in the doubles gave America a sweeping victory in the cup play.

The elimination of the Australian netters by France in the preliminary play for the cup was an interesting development. France, by the caliber of its 1925 play, looms up as the leading contender for the next few years.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

BY NORMAN E. BROWN

President W. W. Campbell, of the University of California, says that college should come first and football next. That's the way it is now. One goes to college first to get on the football team.

Eddie Collins, rated as one of the most popular and brainy men baseball has produced, avers that the "team spirit' is disappearing in baseball and that the public interest now is centered mainly on individual stars. Collins recites how, in the old days, the Athletics for instance, drew the wrath of foreign crowds to the extent of inviting tomato showers and other social demonstrations.

He points out how other visiting teams, on numerous occasions, had to proceed back to their hotels, warily, or by back routes, to escape the peeve of the home team boosters.

Now, however, fans go out mainly to see the Ruths, Hornsbys, Cobbs, et al, perform and the team itself means little.

This may be.

And if it be so the magnates are responsible. Their methods have changed. Time was that they labored to build a team, which by the popularity as a whole, the popularity of the individuals, and the general results obtained made the townfolks adopt said team as their own and back it morally, as well as financially (through their patronage).

Now the usual method of keeping the turnstiles clicking is to go into the open market every now and then and purchase a star player, "a drawing card." Managers are hired and fired; at times, mainly to revive interest in the team rather than because of their shortcomings as baseball leaders.

Of course, on the other hand, it may be that the fans are a more self contained lot now. Although they feel at times that tossing a few cans of pre war tomatoes at various and assorted teams they are able to overcome the temptation by appealing to their better natures—and remembering the price of tomatoes.

Cozy Dolan and Jimmy OConnell, former members of the New York Giants and involved in the 1924 preworld's series scandal, will remain on baseball's black list at least another year, it is intimated in circles close to the powers that be.

Which means that Cozy Dolan's memory will have to remain hazy that much longer. Cozy's brain will be really dusty if he doesn't use it shortly.

METHUSELAH'S WIFE

THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO MARRIED FOR MONEY

BY EDGAR PAUL NORTH

© CENTRAL PRESS ASS'N

THIRTY-TWO.

Four days now, and no letter from Noble. Just the conventional daily telegram, restrained and artificial in wording. Laurel ate her dinner moodily. He might at least have called her by long distance telephone. She remembered wistfully how on the last trip he made previous to their marriage, he called her from New York, and how difficult it was to hear, and all that she did understand was him saying, "I love you, I love you." At the time she was sure that the local telephone operator was listening in.

She was alone, and yet she was not alone. There was Louis, ever attentive. And Joseph, the footman, even more watchful. They grated upon her nerves. She was sure they didn't like her, anyway. The only servant on the place who seemed halfway human was Lena, the cook.

Laurel had not seen Marion since the morning after the party. She supposed that her stepdaughter was at Mrs. Daly's. Noble's sister! How unreasonable she was. The memory of that scene with her sister-in-law still burned. Brent Daly's wife would have a lot to say to Noble Harwood when he came home. Whom would he believe? Laurel was not sure that her husband would not hold her responsible, as had his sister, for Marion's wild party. He would be sure to be irritated, if for no other reason than the smashed shade upon his lovely and curious old reading lamp, a particular pet.

She got up from the dinner table without having her dessert. "I'll have coffee in the library," she told Louis.

She had pawed over Noble's assemblage of books until she knew the contents of the library almost by heart, without finding anything that particularly interested her. She had fallen back on a Trollope novel, one of a complete set Noble had bought sight unseen and never opened. It had not occurred to her to phone the local bookshop for a selection of current fiction. This night, when she took up the novel, her mind refused to become absorbed in it. She waved Louis out. "I'll serve myself."

Her mind turned to her mother. She summoned Louis back and had Joseph plug in an dbring a phone instrument.

"How are you, mother, dear? . . . . Very well. . . . Yes, Noble is still out of the city. May not be back until the first of the week. . . . Why haven't you been over? You'e been neglecting your daughter terribly. You haven't been here since I returned. . Can't you come over this evening? I'm alone. . . I could send the car for you. You could stay all night. Do, mother. . . . Oh, why not? . . . . . I'm sorry you have the headache. You MUST come and see me. I refuse to be deserted in this fashion."

Laurel was endeavoring to talk lightly. She realized somehow that her mother was deliberately avoiding Noble Harwood's house. Why? . . . . She caught at a last hope.

"What is Bernice doing?. . . . She is? Please let me talk to her. . . . . Hello, sis. . . . I'd like you to come over this evening. . . . Oh, that's all right, bring your date along. Who is he—Jimmy? . . . . Fine."

She rang off with pleasure. Even Bernice and Jimmy Archer would be welcome company now. She called Louis again. "I wish you would prepare some sandwiches and put a bottle of champagne in an icebucket. Then you may go, if you like. I shall not need you again."

Louis bowed with a gleam of interest in his eye. It gave Laurel a little thrill to think that he suspected her of having arranged a rendezvous. She went upstairs and changed into a dress of black lace embroidered in silver and rhinestones; a gown that she knew Noble didn't like. She liked its superimposed layers of material, its shoulder drapery, and its decollete bolero. She spent rather longer in arraying herself than she had intended, and her guests were entering the hall, behind Louis, when she went down. She would rather have admitted them herself, and let the butler keep his suspicions.

Bernice kissed her sister affectionately, and Laurel got the idea that Bernice was acting for Jimmy Archer's benefit. After all, there was distinction in being the loving little sister of the wife of the richest man in town. Poor Bernice! Would she ever have a husband? She led the arrivals into the library.

"Very bookish," Jimmy ventured, looking around.

"Yes, and Laurel doesn't read," Bernice laughed.

Laurel colored and glared at her sister. There had been something deliberately belittling about the remark. Managing to control her feelings, she ignored Bernice. "Would you like to dance, Jimmy?"

"Sure."

"Let's go in the ballroom."

The ballroom, when not being used as such, served as the music room. It was necessary for them to push back rugs to obtain room for dancing.

"Why don't you call your servants to do this?" Bernice asked, watching the two of them perform the task.

Laurel gave a little laugh. "I'm so darned tired of being waited on that I'm glad to find something I can do myself."

Jimmy and Berenice had the first dance; but then he danced with Laurel three numbers in succession. Berenice, operating the electric phonograph, resplendent in a Louis XIV cabinet, watched them with hostile eyes. When they had had three dances together and Jimmy looked as if he intended to have her as a partner for a fourth, Laurel said quietly in his ear. "I think it's Berenice's turn."

Berenice, watching them, wondered what it was Laurel said. Instinctively she sensed that the words had something to do with her. When Laurel came over to the instrument with Jimmy, the eyes of the two women met in one of those electrical, feminine glances.

Across the face of the married women is written the calm conviction that she knows everything because she is married; and in the eyes of the single girl dwells the fierce protestation that she knows nothing because she isn't.

Laurel carefully avoided being present whenever the records were finished, so Jimmy and Berenice danced on and on. At last the hostess produced the champagne and sandwiches. Jimmy, after holding back, awkwardly at first, ate ravenously, while Laurel, with no appetite and her glass untouched, watched him. Berenice, too, watched him, provoked and a little ashamed.

"One more dance with you, Laurel, before we go," Jimmy announced, when the last of the sandwiches had disappeared.

She went willingly. Dancing was in her blood. Tonight she wanted to dance on and on. Jimmy wasn't such a bad dancer. . . .

"Your gown is perfectly lovely," he said, softly.

"I'm glad you like it."

"Aren't you rather lonely here alone?"

She did not look him in the eyes. "No, no!" This as if such a thing were unthinkable. "I'm always so busy."

But Jimmy knew she was lying.

"Not all mothers-in-law are bad," said Justice Avory in a London court recently, in denying the suit of Arthur S. Ainsley against his wife's parents, charging that they enticed away his wife. "After all, it must be remembered that a mother-in-law is first of all a mother and only secondly a mother-in-law."

Frank A. Munsey, able business man, is dead. Owner at different times of 18 newspapers. Mr. Munsey died owner of only two. Some he sold, others he suppressed or "merged," to clear up newspaper situation. He was a benefactor of the newspaper field, and as such will be remembered.

Frank Munsey could carry a heavy load without worrying. He said to this writer, "carrying 200,000 shares of stock on margin never bothered me. Now that I have lost interest in stocks I never think of them."

Munsey possessed the power of undivided concentration. He made and spent many millions and undoubtedly has left many millions. He enjoyed his 71 years of life and, a very temperate man, he should have lived longer. Many regret the death of a sincere friend.

In Florida even mail cars and the postal system are jammed and held up because of embargoes and "impossibly" excessive shipments.

S. Davies Warfield, foreseeing the coming trouble, built one new road across Florida and several branches, and some time ago he put Clement S. Ucker, one of his assistants, an able railroad man, in charge of freight congestion to make a general survey of the proposition. It will take, with the best intentions and the hardest work, months to straighten out the Florida snarl. Such congestion has never been known in American railroading.

The Peabody Museum at Yale — please shudder — contains an exhibition purporting to prove the evolution theory, showing man's "biological ascent from protoza to man."

To be told that you are descended from monkeys is bad enough but 10,000 times worse is the idea that your ancestors include the protozoa. Anti-evolutionists would be ashamed to recognize such relatives, of whom any number could live happily in a thimbleful of salt water.

Frank M. Zulauf grieved nine months for his wife, then killed himself. His last words, written on the wall of the room in which he inhaled illuminating gas, were "I sleep."

Sixteen hundred million human beings that Mr. Zulauf left on earth behind him would like to know whether he really sleeps or is wide awake, and what he is doing.

That "perchance to dream" troubles many.

NATION'S CHIEF ABDICATES TO SANTA CLAUS

Uncle Sam's Hired Men and Women Shop in Capital.

HANG WREATHS

Christmas for Coolidges Will be Typical Home Affair.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24. — Calvin Coolidge, director general of the capital's vast army of federal employes, abdicated temporarily today in deference to Santa Claus, that patron saint of the Yuletide, while thousands of Uncle Sam's hired men and women hurried through their last-minute Christmas shopping and prepared to avail themselves of the three-day holiday provided by executive order.

To Mrs. Coolidge and her son, John, fell the pleasant task of decorating the big white mansion. Wreaths of holly and evergreen were hung in all the windows, facing out on Pennsylvania avenue. Inside, and up in the private living room on the second floor, a small black cedar, shipped all the way from Wisconsin by a well-wisher, stood lighted and decorated, waiting for the opening of the family presents tomorrow morning.

Outside, criss-crossed back and forth over the porte-cochere of the main entrance, hung huge electric light bulbs strung up by White House electricians to illuminate the front grounds for the annual Christmas eve singing of carols.

Christmas for the Coolidges will be a typical home affair. Only the three will gather around the little tree in the living room tomorrow morning, in marked contrast to the Yuletide two years ago before the younger son, Calvin, died. Then, a huge tree erected in the historic blue room made an elaborate ceremony of the occasion.

MOTORIST FINED $100 BY MAYOR

Clarence Taylor, Dry Run, was fined $100 and costs by Mayor Charles Brown this morning when he pleaded guilty to a charge of driving a motor vehicle while intoxicated.

Taylor was arrested near the corner of Dresden avenue and Seventh street by Chief of Police McDermott and Patrolman Lister at 5 o'clock last evening after he is alleged to have crashed into an automobile owned and driven by F. W. Miller, St. Clair avenue baker.

The prisoner agreed to pay the damage done to Miller's car. Taylor paid $35 as his fine and promised to pay the $65 balance in semi-monthly installments.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 24.—David Evans, farmer and his son, Wendle, were in a hospital here today for treatment following an attack by a cow on the Evans farm near Gallipolis. The animal, which sank its teeth in the arms of her victims, was believed to be suffering from rabies.

MURDER CHARGE FILED AS CHARLES DEVIE'S FUNERAL IS DEFERRED

PRISONERS ALSO ALLEGED TO HAVE ADMITTED THEY ROBBED VICTIM

Authorities Claim Youths Asserted They Carried Man in Drunken Stupor From Third to Second Floor of Vacant Building, But Deny he Was Dead When They Left Him.

Arrested last night by Wellsville police on charges of suspicion following the mysterious death Monday of Charles Devie, 30, of 605 Ridge avenue, Northside, Pittsburgh, Raymond Carroll, Lester Rowley and William McKinnon, of East Liverpool, and Anthony Dash, of Wellsville, are held without bail today in the jail there pending a hearing before Mayor Frank C. Blackburn.

According to Chief of Police John Fultz, murder charges have been preferred against the quartet, who, grilled last night at the police chief's home in Aten avenue, are alleged to have admitted furnishing Devie with liquor and then, while the man was in a drunken stupor, robbing him of $20 and later depositing him, unconscious, on the top landing of a flight of stairs at 1321 Main street..

McKinnon and Rowley were arrested in East Liverpool last night at 10 o'clock, and Dash and Carroll were apprehended in Wellsville by Patrolman Pugh shortly before on warrants issued by Chief Fultz, following a search that had been under way since early yesterday morning, in which Officers Hurd and Excell had been sent to Steubenville to comb the city and Patrolman Pugh to East Liverpool, with other members of the force directing their attention to Wellsville.

Police Surround Story.

Acting upon the advice of Wellsville authorities, Pittsburgh police are holding the body of Devie at Flannery's morgue, in Grant street, Pittsburgh, pending an examination, probably today or tomorrow, by Wellsville physicians, of the man's stomach and bruises which were seen on his head.

In the presence of Mayor Blackburn and a stenographer, the four youths, whose ages range from 24 to 27, were grilled at the home of the police chief, who has been ill.

Chief Fultz summed up the story alleged to have been told by Rowley as follows:

"Rowley said that he and the three others—Dash, Carroll and McKinnon—met Devie Monday morning at 7 o'clock on Main street. Devie asked the young men where he could get some liquor, and Rowley asserted he could get it for him (Devie). The latter then gave Rowley a five-dollar bill and Rowley, after a short absence, came back with a quart of liquor. This he gave to Devie together with $1 in change. The men then went into the door leading from Main street up the flight of stairs and onto the third floor of the building, where rooms were vacant.

Robbed Man of $20, Claim.

"About half an hour later Devie was drunk. Rowley and McKinnon went through his clothing and took a $20 bill from his pocket. The $1 bill he got from the $5 with which he purchased the liquor was mysteriously

REFUND FARES UNTIL JAN. 1

The Fare Refunding association will refund street car and railroad fares to all out-of-town shoppers who visit here during the remainder of the month, it was announced today.

In former years, fares have been refunded during December only until Christmas, but this year the plan will be extended until New Year's day. The decision, it is believed, will be a stimulant to business during the lull which usually prevails between the two holidays.

LEGION ERECTS COMMUNITY TREE

The American Legion's Community Christmas tree in the Diamond was erected today.

The tree, about 12 feet in height, was purchased from a local wholesale firm. It was decorated by Clarence E. West, who furnished and installed the trees for local merchants about two weeks ago. It will be illuminated with more than 100 various colored electric lights.

The tree will stand until after New Year's day.

FRENCH, DRUSES SIGN TRUCE

All Political Prisoners Liberated Under Armistice.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—Armistice between the French and the Djebel Druse tribesmen has been signed by French high commissioner De Jouvenel, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Cairo today.

The report declares that under the terms of the armistice all political prisoners have been liberated.

Recent reports have indicated that while the French have registered numerous successes against the Druses, who have been in rebellion, that three have been no signs of a collapse on the part of the Druses. The tribesmen have shown an ability to suffer defeat and rise again.

Sultan Atrash, leader of the Djebel Druses, has declared that he would not make peace with the French on any terms short of evacuation of the French from Syria. He has demanded the establishment of an independent country, but has stated that he is willing to have the United States exercise a protectorate over Syria.

PARIS, Dec. 24.—The foreign office has not received confirmation of reports that High Commissioner De Jauvenal has signed an armistice with the Druses.

'GOD'S CHRISTMAS GREETING'--A YULETIDE SERMONETTE--BY THE REV. W. J. H. M'KNIGHT OF CHESTER

(Editor's Note—The following Yuletide sermonette, "God's Christmas Greeting," was written especially for the Review-Tribune by Rev. W. J. H. McKnight, pastor of the First United Presbyterian church of Chester.)

BY REV. W. J. McKNIGHT,

"God hath spoken unto us in His Son."—Hebrews 1:2.

A little six-year-old tiptoed softly up to the side of the crib where lay the home's latest arrival. Placing his lips down close to the little pink ear he whispered: "Now, baby brother, tell us all about God before you forget." No doubt many of us have felt moved to make the same plea as we have looked upon the tiny newcomer, have wondered what that little mind might reveal to us of the Infinite.

Laying hold then of that perfectly normal impulse of the human heart let us permit it this Christmas to carry us back almost two thousand years to bow before the manger in the stable at Bethlehem where we can receive an answer straight from God. The babe speaks to us primarily a message of love, a message of the Divine love that led the Father to give His only-begotten Son and that moved the Son to give up the glory that He had with the Father to offer Himself the sacrifice in our stead.

How fittingly it is all presented to us in the heart of a little babe that is filled with untold capacity to love where that love is permitted. How well also the tender form of the little infant draws forth from even the stony heart the noble emotion of love. That noble virtue of love which is the reigning spirit of Christmas could be personified no more perfectly than in the figure of the young Infant in Mary's arms. The innocent little features speak to us eloquently of God's holiness.

In all too brief a space of time there come into the human countenance the traces of sin and of the burdens thrown upon us because of sin, but in the guileless countenance before us God reminds us of His holiness and quickens within us the consciousness of our own sinfulness. Odd as it may seem, the Babe tells us of the power of Almighty God. From the date that the newborn child enters the home the same hand that shakes the toy in glee is the hand that moves the scepter of power. As he is made ruler of the home so the Christchild must be enthroned in our hearts.

The Christmas Greeting that comes straight from God to us in the person of His Son is: "There is born to you this day in the city of David a Saviour who is Christ the Lord."

NATION'S CHIEF ABDICATES TO SANTA CLAUS

Uncle Sam's Hired Men and Women Shop in Capital.

HANG WREATHS

Christmas for Coolidges Will be Typical Home Affair.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24. — Calvin Coolidge, director general of the capital's vast army of federal employes, abdicated temporarily today in deference to Santa Claus, that patron saint of the Yuletide, while thousands of Uncle Sam's hired men and women hurried through their last-minute Christmas shopping and prepared to avail themselves of the three-day holiday provided by executive order.

To Mrs. Coolidge and her son, John, fell the pleasant task of decorating the big white mansion. Wreaths of holly and evergreen were hung in all the windows, facing out on Pennsylvania avenue. Inside, and up in the private living room on the second floor, a small black cedar, shipped all the way from Wisconsin by a well-wisher, stood lighted and decorated, waiting for the opening of the family presents tomorrow morning.

Outside, criss-crossed back and forth over the porte-cochere of the main entrance, hung huge electric light bulbs strung up by White House electricians to illuminate the front grounds for the annual Christmas eve singing of carols.

Christmas for the Coolidges will be a typical home affair. Only the three will gather around the little tree in the living room tomorrow morning, in marked contrast to the Yuletide two years ago before the younger son, Calvin, died. Then, a huge tree erected in the historic blue room made an elaborate ceremony of the occasion.

MOTORIST FINED $100 BY MAYOR

Clarence Taylor, Dry Run, was fined $100 and costs by Mayor Charles Brown this morning when he pleaded guilty to a charge of driving a motor vehicle while intoxicated.

Taylor was arrested near the corner of Dresden avenue and Seventh street by Chief of Police McDermott and Patrolman Lister at 5 o'clock last evening after he is alleged to have crashed into an automobile owned and driven by F. W. Miller, St. Clair avenue baker.

The prisoner agreed to pay the damage done to Miller's car. Taylor paid $35 as his fine and promised to pay the $65 balance in semi-monthly installments.

Mad Cow Attacks Farmers.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 24.—David Evans, farmer and his son, Wendle, were in a hospital here today for treatment following an attack by a cow on the Evans farm near Gallipolis. The animal, which sank its teeth in the arms of her victims, was believed to be suffering from rabies.

MURDER CHARGE FILED AS CHARLES DEVIE'S FUNERAL IS DEFERRED

PRISONERS ALSO ALLEGED TO HAVE ADMITTED THEY ROBBED VICTIM

Authorities Claim Youths Asserted They Carried Man in Drunken Stupor From Third to Second Floor of Vacant Building, But Deny he Was Dead When They Left Him.

Arrested last night by Wellsville police on charges of suspicion following the mysterious death Monday of Charles Devie, 30, of 605 Ridge avenue, Northside, Pittsburgh, Raymond Carroll, Lester Rowley and William McKinnon, of East Liverpool, and Anthony Dash, of Wellsville, are held without bail today in the jail there pending a hearing before Mayor Frank C. Blackburn.

According to Chief of Police John Fultz, murder charges have been preferred against the quartet, who, grilled last night at the police chief's home in Aten avenue, are alleged to have admitted furnishing Devie with liquor and then, while the man was in a drunken stupor, robbing him of $20 and later depositing him, unconscious, on the top landing of a flight of stairs at 1321 Main street..

McKinnon and Rowley were arrested in East Liverpool last night at 10 o'clock, and Dash and Carroll were apprehended in Wellsville by Patrolman Pugh shortly before on warrants issued by Chief Fultz, following a search that had been under way since early yesterday morning, in which Officers Hurd and Excell had been sent to Steubenville to comb the city and Patrolman Pugh to East Liverpool, with other members of the force directing their attention to Wellsville.

Police Surgeon's Story.

Acting upon the advice of Wellsville authorities, Pittsburgh police are holding the body of Devie at Flannery's morgue, in Grant street, Pittsburgh, pending an examination, probably today or tomorrow, by Wellsville physicians, of the man's stomach and bruises which were seen on his head.

In the presence of Mayor Blackburn and a stenographer, the four youths, whose ages range from 24 to 27, were grilled at the home of the police chief, who has been ill.

Chief Fultz summed up the story alleged to have been told by Rowley as follows:

"Rowley said that he and the three others—Dash, Carroll and McKinnon—met Devie Monday morning at 7 o'clock on Main street. Devie asked the young men where he could get some liquor, and Rowley asserted he could get it for him (Devie). The latter then gave Rowley a five-dollar bill and Rowley, after a short absence, came back with a quart of liquor. This he gave to Devie together with $1 in change. The men then went into the door leading from Main street up the flight of stairs and onto the third floor of the building, where rooms were vacant.

Robbed Man of $20, Claim.

"About half an hour later Devie was drunk. Rowley and McKinnon went through his clothing and took a $20 bill from his pocket. The $1 bill he got from the $5 with which he purchased the liquor was mysteriously

REFUND FARES UNTIL JAN. 1

The Fare Refunding association will refund street car and railroad fares to all out-of-town shoppers who visit here during the remainder of the month, it was announced today.

In former years, fares have been refunded during December only until Christmas, but this year the plan will be extended until New Year's day. The decision, it is believed, will be a stimulant to business during the lull which usually prevails between the two holidays.

LEGION ERECTS COMMUNITY TREE

The American Legion's Community Christmas tree in the Diamond was erected today.

The tree, about 12 feet in height, was purchased from a local wholesale firm. It was decorated by Clarence E. West, who furnished and installed the trees for local merchants about two weeks ago. It will be illuminated with more than 100 various colored electric lights.

The tree will stand until after New Year's day.

FRENCH, DRUSES SIGN TRUCE

All Political Prisoners Liberated Under Armistice.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—Armistice between the French and the Djebol Druse tribesmen has been signed by French high commissioner De Jouvenel, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Cairo today.

The report declares that under the terms of the armistice all political prisoners have been liberated.

Recent reports have indicated that while the French have registered numerous successes against the Druses, who have been in rebellion, that three have been no signs of a collapse on the part of the Druses. The tribesmen have shown an ability to suffer defeat and rise again.

Sultan Atrash, leader of the Djebel Druses, has declared that he would not make peace with the French on any terms short of evacuation of the French from Syria. He has demanded the establishment of an independent country, but has stated that he is willing to have the United States exercise a protectorate over Syria.

PARIS, Dec. 24.—The foreign office has not received confirmation of reports that High Commissioner De Jauvenal has signed an armistice with the Druses.

'GOD'S CHRISTMAS GREETING'--A YULETIDE SERMONETTE--BY THE REV. W. J. H. M'KNIGHT OF CHESTER

(Editor's Note—The following Yuletide sermonette, "God's Christmas Greeting," was written especially for the Review-Tribune by Rev. W. J. H. McKnight, pastor of the First United Presbyterian church of Chester.)

BY REV. W. J. McKNIGHT,

"God hath spoken unto us in His Son."—Hebrews 1:2.

A little six-year-old tiptoed softly up to the side of the crib where lay the home's latest arrival. Placing his lips down close to the little pink ear he whispered: "Now, baby brother, tell us all about God before you forget." No doubt many of us have felt moved to make the same plea as we have looked upon the tiny newcomer, have wondered what that little mind might reveal to us of the Infinite.

Laying hold then of that perfectly normal impulse of the human heart let us permit it this Christmas to carry us back almost two thousand years to how before the manger in the stable at Bethlehem where we can receive an answer straight from God. The babe speaks to us primarily a message of love, a message of the Divine love that led the Father to give His only-begotten Son and that moved the Son to give up the glory that He had with the Father to offer Himself the sacrifice in our stead.

How fittingly it is all presented to us in the heart of a little babe that is filled with untold capacity to love where that love is permitted. How well also the tender form of the little infant draws forth from even the stony heart the noble emotion of love. That noble virtue of love which is the reigning spirit of Christmas could be personified no more perfectly than in the figure of the young Infant in Mary's arms. The innocent little features speak to us eloquently of God's holiness.

In all too brief a space of time there come into the human countenance the traces of sin and of the burdens thrown upon us because of sin, but in the guileless countenance before us God reminds us of His holiness and quickens within us the consciousness of our own sinfulness. Odd as it may seem, the Babe tells us of the power of Almighty God. From the date that the newborn child enters the home the same hand that shakes the toy in glee is the hand that moves the scepter of power. As he is made ruler of the home so the Christchild must be enthroned in our hearts.

The Christmas Greeting that comes straight from God to us in the person of His Son is: "There is born to you this day in the city of David a Saviour who is Christ the Lord."

Less Rain Noted on Northern Pacific Coast

Tacoma, Wash.—Old residents of that part of Washington and Oregon lying between the Cascade mountains and the Pacific ocean long have been declaring that cutting the dense timber that once covered the region is gradually changing the climate.

"It doesn't rain like it used to," the old-timers remark, recalling the days when they referred to one another as "webb-footers" and "moss backs."

And now comes L. C. Cover, government weather observer here, with figures that partly corroborate the old settlers.

His figures show there has been a steady decline in rainfall here during five-year periods since 1895. The average annual rainfall from 1895 to 1900 was 45.99 inches. From 1920 to 1925 it had fallen to 33.96.

A generation ago the average rainfall in this district was 45 inches a year, but the present average, based on all available figures of the past, has dropped to 40.72.

All-Star Cast Will Appear Here In 'No, No, Nanette'

FILM FEATURE AT AMERICAN

Lowell Sherman Has Stellar Role in "Satan in Sables."

"Satan in Sables," the Warner Brothers' classic of the screen starring Lowell Sherman, which opens today at the American theatre, brings a vividly dramatic story of the screen as well as a novel note of artistic elegance of setting.

Paris, the romantic, gay, picturesque, pre-war Paris, flush with wealth, art and amusement, is the locale of this extraordinary story written by Bradley King. Throughout the picture runs the contrast between the motly colorful life of the old Quartier Latin with its students, its sinister underworld hangers on, and the prodigal magnificance of the nobleman who pursued gayety without ever wearying of his quest.

Mr. Sherman appears to the best advantage of his cinema career in the role of Michael Lyev Yervedoff, a prince of the royal house of Russia. His characterization of the gentlemanly profligate, the dissolute but lovable spendthrift, is perfect, and deeply moving when he finds regeneration in tragedy and in love.

John Harron, as Paul, the young brother of the Prince, scores a distinct hit in his carefree youth and bitter disillusion. His unsophisticated manner make him an excellent foil for the suave poise of the star.

And Pauline Garon as Colette, gay, honest, big-eyed Collette who loved the prince and won his heart, is a delightful addition to this all-star cast.

Here is a dramatic and moving story, perfectly directed by James Flood, and with Lowell Sherman heading the list of prominent, players. You will find that "Satan in Sables" will hold you tense with interest from start to finish.

When "No, No, Nanette" was first produced in April of last year, for its first time on any stage, every critic predicted fame for this delightful musical play and a fortune for H. H. Franzee, its producer. After two preliminary weeks, "No, No, Nanette" went almost directly to the Harris theatre in Chicago; and how well its first audience forecast its destiny is told in its phenomenal Chicago record, which mounted to 12 months is told in its phenomenal Chicago record, which mounted to 12 months of solid capacity, nearly 500 performances, with the demand far from satisfied when previous bookings that could no longer be postponed carried this company to Boston and New York.

So, Mr. Frazee, wise showman that he is, and moved by the persistent claims of all other American cities, decided to satisfy this demand while "Nanette" was still a novelty and a sensation. Accordingly, some time ago he selected with great care three special companies which, in the public value of their leading players, fully rival their sister organization.

One of these companies closed its 27th week in Philadelphia; the second, after 25 capacity weeks in Los Angeles, is now in its 20th week in San Francisco; the third will be seen here. In New York the success of "No, No, Nanette" has reached the proportions of a furor; while in London and Australia seats must be secured months ahead.

The cast which will be seen at the Ceramic theatre Thursday, Dec. 31, includes such well-known and able exponents of song, dance and laughter, as John Hayms, Leila McIntyre, Eulalie Young, Roland Woodruff, Dorothy Newell, Floyd English, Helen Case, Mildred Joy, Janearl Johnson, Myrtle Miller and a dozen or more other principals of equal renown. The chorus an exceptionally interesting one, contains a gorgeous garden of girls. There are a round dozen song hits, with "I Want to Be Happy" and "Ten for Two" which have set the world "stepping" in the forefront of favor.

Norway's shipbiulding industry is depressed because the workers have refused to accept wage cuts which would bring cost of production down to the level of other European shipbuilding yards.

'STAGE STRUCK' AT CERAMIC

Gloria Swanson Stars in Allan Dwan Production.

In "Stage Struck," which is the film attraction at the Ceramic theatre today, tomorrow and Saturday, Gloria Swanson returns to the type of production that registered her first great popularity and which established her as one of the greatest character actresses of all time.

"Stage Struck," written especially for the star by Frank R. Adams, whose stories are read by millions in Cosmopolitan Magazine, tells a most wonderful and thoroughly logical story. It has been the dream of every young girl to grow up to be a great actress—to go on the stage.

Allan Dwan has taken this human theme and developed it into one of the greatest box office attractions of Miss Swanson's career. Nothing more delightfully appealing has ever been assigned this captivating star.

Judge for yourself; Gloria in a broad comedy as a waitress in a factory town restaurant on the Ohio river. She is smitten with a pancake artist who is fond of actresses. She is taking a correspondence course in acting. The picture opens with a gorgeous dream sequence, done in natural colors, has a series of side-splitting incidents in the restaurant and also some rich comedy stuff on one of the famous floating theatres of the Ohio river.

And it's a new kind of love story. Instead of the old stuff where the young man pursues the girl around, the girl pursues the man. Her idea of a great artist is a man who can toss flapjacks into the air and have them come down the other side up in the right place on the griddle. And his idea of a wonderful girl is an actress who wins the applause of the multitude.

Gloria mends his shirts and does his laundry, but he doesn't know it. When she shows up with the make-up on her face he bawls her out. When she tries to commit suicide he hands her another call-down. He has a "treat-em-rough" system, but he discovers in the end that he likes her better than anything or anybody else in the world.

A central purchasing board has been established by the Cuban government to purchase all supplies and equipment costing more than $5,000.

Japan is the chief Asiatic market for American electrical equipment, with British India second and the Philippines third.

The cost of manufacturing a standard locomotive in Poland is about $36,000 as compared with a cost in England of $42,000.

Savings accounts in Hungary have declined as a result of habits of lavish expenditure formed during the inflation period.

The Children's Festival

It used to be customary in the Old World to appoint "boy bishops" for the Christmas holidays. Such a "bishop" used to rule London in Shakespeare's day, from December 6 to 28. This quaint ceremony lasted in Germany until very recently.

It was all play, of course. But it was recognition of the part children have always played, and always should play, in Christmas and in Christianity.

Christ loved children, and built His teaching around them. The day celebrated by Christendom as His birthday—which is also the birthday of the solar year, and so in a double sense the giver of light—is pre-eminently the children's festival.

How they do love it! They recognize it as theirs, and take possession of it, and give it their spirit, and put their mark all over it. It is the one holiday in the year for them, to be looked forward to with excitement and expectancy, and welcomed with joy, and spent in rapture, and remembered lovingly through the rest of the year.

The enjoyment of grown-ups is largely vicarious—as it should be in good Christian folk. Their chief role is giving. And in that, they find their Christmas satisfaction, as the youngsters find theirs mainly in receiving. For once in the year, the sophisticated and cynical grown-up really comes to feel that there is something after all in the Christian idea, "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

Where there are no children, there is no Christmas. The man or woman who has none to minister to on this day is driven to borrow them from relatives and friends, or go forth and seek them in the highways and byways.

The grown-ups enjoy it just to the extent that they enter into the frank, joyous, believing spirit of the children themselves. Around the hearth on Christmas morning, all are children together. And this in itself proves the validity of the Christian festival.

Get Your 1926 Auto License

If East Liverpool automobile owners expect to operate their motor cars on New Year's day in keeping with the law requiring up-to-the-minute observance of license regulations, Deputy Automobile Commissioner J. S. Hilbert and his aides will be kept on the jump during the next eight days, including today.

Although the time limit for use of the 1925 tag expires on December 31, shopping in licenses required by the Buckeye state for operation of automotive vehicles over public highways during the next 12 months has been slow. Less than 700 plates have been issued here, and any grammar school pupil will tell you subtraction proves that 5,100 of last year's car owners have failed to apply for the new tags.

Perhaps Santa Claus has drained the pocketbooks of some of the delinquents, but this is no excuse in the East Liverpool district courts, where persons who attempt to motor without the formality of attaching the 1925 plates to their cars will face prosecution. Warning to this effect has been given by the police.

Brown and white are the colors of the new style in automobile licenses, and fashion decrees that the old shades of cream and black are out of date when Father Time rings the bell on 1925. And while the cost of the new plates is reduced, there is more trouble in securing them, for car owners must produce a bill of sale as well as a tax receipt.

A hint to the wise is sufficient.

Colds At School

It is the season of colds, when "common colds" are commoner than ever, and more dangerous.

The worst breeding place of this ubiquitous disease is the schoolroom. Children with colds insist on broadcasting them, and children without colds are seldom careful to avoid snifflers and coughers. Many children catch cold at school over and over again, and then bring it home and distribute it among the rest of the family. So common is this procedure that thousands of mothers and fathers dread to see school begin in the fall, and particularly dread the winter months.

It isn't only the "common colds," either. Most of the children's diseases that spread so easily through a community begin with a cold. So there is never any telling what an apparently ordinary cold may be the harbinger of.

Parents should realize far more than they usually do what a serious offense it is against the community to let a child with a cold in the contagious stage go to school. Often the school authorities and teachers are astonishingly lax in the matter.

If every sniffling or coughing child were sent home, with orders to stay there until the cold was cured, the total loss of time for sickness in the schoolroom would be greatly diminished, and the community health would be greatly improved.

Now that Ireland and the Balkans are pacified, some of the other conscientious scrappers will soon feel obliged to start something.

The Carnegie Institute of Technology at Pittsburgh has a "professor of plumbing." Now, you say what he should teach his students first.

A monument to Mother Eve is erected in Greenville, S. C. Why didn't western apple-growers ever think of that?

Neighborhood News— By Fontaine Fox

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—Rialto producers are looking for an American Michael Arlen to sprinkle a little glamour on the drama. Arlen took ordinary hokum and dressed it up in Mayfair clothes. He put jade buttons on the weskit of a Soho sap, gave him a drawl and he became a favorite of the boudoirs.

He took stuff of the servants hall below stairs and fitted it to the mellow incandescence of the drawing room. A Strand trollop touched by Arlen magic was transported from pavement promenades to a mauve colored Daimler and seemed quite thus and thus.

A Savoy drink cadger with over Niagara mustache and soiled spats was glossed to the opulence of a Sir Soandso, Bart., and the public in perfidious old Albion and American gulped it down and smasked lips for more. Arlen would be the last to deny the velvet-sheathed bunk.

He made the gutter efflorese. But he thought of it first, and as the originator is entitled to rewards that are his. The American drama-makers have dramatized the bedrooms but with too much stark reality. They have neglected tony backgrounds and swank names.

"Getting Gertie's Garter," was of the same stuff as "These Charming People,' but it was not whipped up to the same romantic importance. Arlen has proved you can Maggie McSwatt, a name like Iris, floss up her phrases, and the gallery and orchestra will sit enthralled.

The worst rotter, so long as his lapel blooms with a rose and he is able to say "How extraw-dineery!" takes on the significance of a hot figure in a world of fashionables. Arlen is deft with the trick of spreading witchery throughout his scenes.

He knows the appeal of flowery couches, decollette ladies, music, lustre, jewels and singing bulbuls. Most folk face so much reality they tingle to the artificial, and the American playwright who can do with Park Avenue what Arlen did with Mayfair is not going to worry about the rent for several years.

The other night I dined in a cafe that was to be padlocked next morning for a year. Somehow I could think only of the waiters—all rather old men suffering from the broken arched misery of their calling. They had been serving regular customers for years. Many legal violations may have been forced upon them but after all they had to live. They went about their work as pleasantly as ever, although I have no doubt their hearts were heavy. As one who has lost many jobs, I know of nothing quite so depressing. Illness does not bring the same despair.

"What do you expect to do after they close here?" I asked my waiter.

"Begin a long hunt for a job, I suppose," he replied.

Perhaps sympathy for the man losing a job is wasted. Save through drink, I have never known a man to lose a job who did not land a better one. I have watched this phenomena for years, but is is perhaps scant cheer for the man who has just lost his job.

Motorcycle cops have thrown the fear of the law and traffic court justice into the hearts of Central Park motor speeders. Statistics show it is one of the safest places in the city for motoring. Motor cops can hide in the bushes and picked up a speeder before he has gone a city block. As a result, park traffic has a steady and rather monotonous flow. Sometimes in the early morning a joy rider is ditched against a tree, but during the day the park becomes the heaven for those who enjoy a slow pace.

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

New Grade Crossing Guard.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—From Boston comes word of a new device to guard grade crossings and put an end to or minimize the number of accidents in which motor vehicles dispute the right of way with railway trains, with appalling results in annual fatalities. William H. Banks, a well known manufacturer of the Hub, is the inventor.

That Mr. Banks is actuated wholly by public spirited motives in bringing his invention to the attention of the public is attested by his statement that he is seeking neither recognition nor profit through it, and, moreover, is ready to pay for the installation of an experimental guard that will demonstrate whether or not it makes good his claim for it.

Railroad officials and highway commissioners whose attention has been called to the device have indicated their interest in it, but have not gone so far as to give it a try-out. Mr. Banks is now preparing to submit his idea to Secretary Herbert Hoover and the committee on highway safety which has been organized as one of the collateral activities of the department of commerce.

The new guard is based on somewhat the same principle as the letter S concrete bridges that feature some of the highways of the United States, notably in Ohio. It is utterly impossible to negotiate these bridges at high speed. The motorist must slow down or invite certain disaster. The catastrophe can not be averted by "taking a chance" of beating anything or anybody to the point of danger.

Consequently the driver slows down, of if he does not, shortly thereafter one of those sinister little white monuments marks the spot of his folly and other motorists profit by his experience.

The underlying idea is that the only effective way of combatting the grade crossing menace is to recognize and deal with the psychology of the average driver of an automobile or truck. Students of the problem say that grade crossing tenders with their flags, and crossing warnings or bells or lowering gates, excite a gambling spirit in many drivers, inspiring them to take a chance on the mere possibility of getting by with it, and that the only way to deal with all such is to give them 100 per cent opposition.

The Compulsion Treatment.

Compulsion is the only treatment for drivers of this type, it is asserted. They will not take chances with a stone wall, and that, in effect, is what Mr. Banks claims his guard to be. It is not a stone wall because it is constructed of concrete, but he says it will have all the menace of one and will be as conspicuous either by daylighe or by headlight. It will compel the driver to reduce speed to a point where his machine will be under perfect control.

Instead of making the approach and crossing of a railroad in the form of a letter S, Mr. Banks erects concrete wals 20 to 24 inches in height from a point 85 feet from the railroad right of way. At this point the walls flare out on either side to a width fully encompassing the roadbed of the highway. Then they curve gently in, and then out, forming an oval 43 feet in diameter, with its center 43 feet from the railroad right of way, and then the walls curve in again until they mark the width of the ordinary roadbed, flaring out slightly at the right of way. In the center of the large oval is what is in effect an oval island formed by similar concrete walls curving in the same arc as the outer walls, but with a 9-foot opening in the center of the roadway at either end. The opening at the end farthest from the railroad track is guarded by a gate, or by a chain on flexible posts.

Thus the driver of an automobile must slow down to pass through the guard by making the circle to the right, or, if he elects to make passage straight through the small island in the center of the large oval, he must stop to open the gate, or slow down to force down the chain on the flexible posts. The possibility of making the passage straight through the guard insures that it will not be an obstruction to the passage of long bodies, such as trucks loaded with lumber or timbers.

The motorists attempting to make passage through this guard for the first time, it is pointed out, sees the approaches and their outposts with the usual markings. He observes the lights, signals, and other warnings which inform him of his proximity to a railroad crossing, and the sight of the guard itself causes him to halt or come to a very slow speed. Whatever dare devil spirit he may have had will be checked, or if he is merely proceeding carelessly or absent-mindedly he will be compelled to thing of his situation and act accordingly.

No Other Practical Way.

"I have devoted much time and thought to the matter and have come to the conclusion that there is no other practical way of solving the grade crossing problem,' says Mr. Banks. "I have studied various mechanical means of guarding crossings and am convinced that all such are either impracticable or untrustworthy. If the methods now being used are ineffective—and the amazing frequency of fatal accidents certainly proves that they are—what then? Shall we try something else, or shall we go on with the killings?

"My guard is intended for isolated crossings rather than for those on congested thoroughfares. In studying crossings with heavy traffic I find little inclination on the part of drivers to take chances. They accept the situation and govern themselves accordingly. But on free thoroughfares they pay little or no heed to signs, bells, and the like, maintaining the same speed as though no crossing was at hand—indeed, in many instances, as if they were wholly unconscious of their surroundings.

The inventor points out further that the absent-minded drivers, as well as the reckless and careless, must be safeguarded, and that for them a clear view of a railroad crossing and a wide, straight highway approaching it are little protection. They must be restrained. Mechanical and human guards are ineffectual and both are prohibitive in the expense of maintenance. Therefore, he argues, a prohibitive in the expense of maintenance. Therefore, he argues, a part of the roadway must be constructed, as planned in his scheme, so that drivers must reduce their speed and thereby more closely note their surroundings.

"When they do that the battle is won," continues Mr. Banks. "Whether we like constricted sections in highways or not, a means to compel the application of brakes by those who should but will not do so of their oown free willl, must be devised. This cannot be done by any system of warning but must be accomplished through a positive check, which is the fundamental principle of the guard I have devised."

The inventor does not go into the cost of his guard, but experts say that it would not be prohibitive if it were constructed at the same time the highway is being paved or built. There would be practically no maintenance cost.

Any county, city, or state has the permission of Mr. Banks to adopt and use hsi grade crossing guard.

Ralph De Palma, the famous racing driver, says: "I am convinced that the motorist who figures in a grade crossing accident seldom if ever, has a defense. He is blind to gates and watchmen and flashing red lights, deaf to bells and whistles. He is an enigma, a charter member of the order of the Utter Dam Fool."

EAST LIVERPOOL — AMERICA'S POTTERY CENTER

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1925.

The Children's Festival

It used to be customary in the Old World to appoint "boy bishops" for the Christmas holidays. Such a "bishop" used to rule London in Shakespeare's day, from December 6 to 28. This quaint ceremony lasted in Germany until very recently.

It was all play, of course. But it was recognition of the part children have always played, and always should play, in Christmas and in Christianity.

Christ loved children, and built His teaching around them. The day celebrated by Christendom as His birthday—which is also the birthday of the solar year, and so in a double sense the giver of light—is pre-eminently the children's festival.

How they do love it! They recognize it as theirs, and take possession of it, and give it their spirit, and put their mark all over it. It is the one holiday in the year for them, to be looked forward to with excitement and expectancy, and welcomed with joy, and spent in rapture, and remembered lovingly through the rest of the year.

The enjoyment of grown-ups is largely vicarious—as it should be in good Christian folk. Their chief role is giving. And in that, they find their Christmas satisfaction, as the youngsters find theirs mainly in receiving. For once in the year, the sophisticated and cynical grown-up really comes to feel that there is something after all in the Christian idea, "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

Where there are no children, there is no Christmas. The man or woman who has none to minister to on this day is driven to borrow them from relatives and friends, or go forth and seek them in the highways and byways.

The grown-ups enjoy it just to the extent that they enter into the frank, joyous, believing spirit of the children themselves. Around the hearth on Christmas morning, all are children together. And this in itself proves the validity of the Christian festival.

Get Your 1926 Auto License

If East Liverpool automobile owners expect to operate their motor cars on New Year's day in keeping with the law requiring up-to-the-minute observance of license regulations, Deputy Automobile Commissioner J. S. Hilbert and his aides will be kept on the jump during the next eight days, including today.

Although the time limit for use of the 1925 tag expires on December 31, shopping in licenses required by the Buckeye state for operation of automotive vehicles over public highways during the next 12 months has been slow. Less than 700 plates have been issued here, and any grammar school pupil will tell you subtraction proves that 5,100 of last year's car owners have failed to apply for the new tags.

Perhaps Santa Claus has drained the pocketbooks of some of the delinquents, but this is no excuse in the East Liverpool district courts, where persons who attempt to motor without the formality of attaching the 1925 plates to their cars will face prosecution. Warning to this effect has been given by the police.

Brown and white are the colors of the new style in automobile licenses, and fashion decrees that the old shades of cream and black are out of date when Father Time rings the bell on 1925. And while the cost of the new plates is reduced, there is more trouble in securing them, for car owners must produce a bill of sale as well as a tax receipt.

A hint to the wise is sufficient.

Colds At School

It is the season of colds, when "common colds" are commoner than ever, and more dangerous.

The worst breeding place of this ubiquitous disease is the schoolroom. Children with colds insist on broadcasting them, and children without colds are seldom careful to avoid snifflers and coughers. Many children catch cold at school over and over again, and then bring it home and distribute it among the rest of the family. So common is this procedure that thousands of mothers and fathers dread to see school begin in the fall, and particularly dread the winter months.

It isn't only the "common colds," either. Most of the children's diseases that spread so easily through a community begin with a cold. So there is never any telling what an apparently ordinary cold may be the harbinger of.

Parents should realize far more than they usually do what a serious offense it is against the community to let a child with a cold in the contagious stage go to school. Often the school authorities and teachers are astonishingly lax in the matter.

If every sniffling or coughing child were sent home, with orders to stay there until the cold was cured, the total loss of time for sickness in the schoolroom would be greatly diminished, and the community health would be greatly improved.

Now that Ireland and the Balkans are pacified, some of the other conscientious scrappers will soon feel obliged to start something.

The Carnegie Institute of Technology at Pittsburgh has a "professor of plumbing." Now, you say what he should teach his students first.

A monument to Mother Eve is erected in Greenville, S. C. Why didn't western apple-growers ever think of that?

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—Rialto producers are looking for an American Michael Arlen to sprinkle a little glamour on the drama. Arlen took ordinary hokum and dressed it up in Mayfair clothes. He put jade buttons on the weskit of a Soho sap, gave him a drawl and he became a favorite of the boudoirs.

He took stuff of the servants hall below stairs and fitted it to the mellow incandescence of the drawing room. A Strand trollop touched by Arlen magic was transported from pavement promenades to a mauve-colored Daimler and seemed quite thus and thus.

A Savoy drink cadger with over-Niagara mustache and soiled spats was glossed to the opulence of a Sir Soandso, Bart., and the public in perfidious old Albion and American gulped it down and smasked lips for more. Arlen would be the last to deny the velvet-sheathed bunk.

He made the gutter effloresce. But he thought of it first, and as the originator is entitled to rewards that are his. The American drama-makers have dramatized the bedrooms but with too much stark reality. They have neglected tony backgrounds and swank names.

"Getting Gertie's Garter," was of the same stuff as "These Charming People,' but it was not whipped up to the same romantic importance. Arlen has proved you can Maggie McSwatt, a name like Iris, floss up her phrases, and the gallery and orchestra will sit enthralled.

The worst rotter, so long as his lapel blooms with a rose and he is able to say "How extraw-dineery!" takes on the significance of a hot figure in a world of fashionables. Arlen is deft with the trick of spreading witchery throughout his scenes.

He knows the appeal of flowery couches, decollette ladies, music, lustre, jewels and singing bulbuls. Most folk face so much reality they tingle to the artificial, and the American playwright who can do with Park Avenue what Arlen did with Mayfair is not going to worry about the rent for several years.

The other night I dined in a cafe that was to be padlocked next morning for a year. Somehow I could think only of the waiters—all rather old men suffering from the broken arched misery of their calling. They had been serving regular customers for years. Many legal violations may have been forced upon them but after all they had to live. They went about their work as pleasantly as ever, although I have no doubt their hearts were heavy. As one who has lost many jobs, I know of nothing quite so depressing. Illness does not bring the same despair.

"What do you expect to do after they close here?" I asked my waiter.

"Begin a long hunt for a job, I suppose,' he replied.

Perhaps sympathy for the man losing a job is wasted. Save through drink, I have never known a man to lose a job who did not land a better one. I have watched this phenomena for years, but is is perhaps scant cheer for the man who has just lost his job.

Motorcycle cops have thrown the fear of the law and traffic court justice into the hearts of Central Park motor speeders. Statistics show it is one of the safest places in the city for motoring. Motor cops can hide in the bushes and picked up a speeder before he has gone a city block. As a result, park traffic has a steady and rather monotonous flow. Sometimes in the early morning a joy rider is ditched against a tree, but during the day the park becomes the heaven for those who enjoy a slow pace.

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

New Grade Crossing Guard.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—From Boston comes word of a new device to guard grade crossings and put an end to or minimize the number of accidents in which motor vehicles dispute the right of way with railway trains, with appalling results in annual fatalities. William H. Banks, a well known manufacturer of the Hub, is the inventor.

That Mr. Banks is actuated wholly by public spirited motives in bringing his invention to the attention of the public is attested by his statement that he is seeking neither recognition nor profit through it, and, moreover, is ready to pay for the installation of an experimental guard that will demonstrate whether or not it makes good his claim for it.

Railroad officials and highway commissioners whose attention has been called to the device have indicated their interest in it, but have not gone so far as to give it a try-out. Mr. Banks is now preparing to submit his idea to Secretary Herbert Hoover and the committee on highway safety which has been organized as one of the collateral activities of the department of commerce.

The new guard is based on somewhat the same principle as the letter S concrete bridges that feature some of the highways of the United States, notably in Ohio. It is utterly impossible to negotiate these bridges at high speed. The motorist must slow down or invite certain disaster. The catastrophe can not be averted by "taking a chance" of beating anything or anybody to the point of danger.

Consequently the driver slows down, of if he does not, shortly thereafter one of those sinister little white monuments marks the spot of his folly and other motorists profit by his experience.

The underlying idea is that the only effective way of combatting the grade crossing menace is to recognize and deal with the psychology of the average driver of an automobile or truck. Students of the problem say that grade crossing tenders with their flags, and crossing warnings or bells or lowering gates, excite a gambling spirit in many drivers, inspiring them to take a chance on the mere possibility of getting by with it, and that the only way to deal with all such is to give them 100 per cent opposition.

The Compulsion Treatment.

Compulsion is the only treatment for drivers of this type, it is asserted. They will not take chances with a stone wall, and that, in effect, is what Mr. Banks claims his guard to be. It is not a stone wall because it is constructed of concrete, but he says it will have all the menace of one and will be as conspicuous either by daylighe or by headlight. It will compel the driver to reduce speed to a point where his machine will be under perfect control.

Instead of making the approach and crossing of a railroad in the form of a letter S, Mr. Banks erects concrete wals 20 to 24 inches in height from a point 85 feet from the railroad right of way. At this point the walls flare out on either side to a width fully encompassing the roadbed of the highway. Then they curve gently in, and then out, forming an oval 43 feet in diameter, with its center 43 feet from the railroad right of way, and then the walls curve in again until they mark the width of the ordinary roadbed, flaring out slightly at the right of way. In the center of the large oval is what is in effect an oval island formed by similar concrete walls curving in the same arc as the outer walls, but with a 9-foot opening in the center of the roadway at either end. The opening at the end farthest from the railroad track is guarded by a gate, or by a chain on flexible posts.

Thus the driver of an automobile must slow down to pass through the guard by making the circle to the right, or, if he elects to make passage straight through the small island in the center of the large oval, he must stop to open the gate, or slow down to force down the chain on the flexible posts. The possibility of making the passage straight through the guard insures that it will not be an obstruction to the passage of long bodies, such as trucks loaded with lumber or timbers.

The motorists attempting to make passage through this guard for the first time, it is pointed out, sees the approaches and their outposts with the usual markings. He observes the lights, signals, and other warnings which inform him of his proximity to a railroad crossing, and the sight of the guard itself causes him to halt or come to a very slow speed. Whatever dare devil spirit he may have had will be checked, or if he is merely proceeding carelessly or absent-mindedly he will be compelled to thing of his situation and act accordingly.

No Other Practical Way.

"I have devoted much time and thought to the matter and have come to the conclusion that there is no other practical way of solving the grade crossing problem,' says Mr. Banks. "I have studied various mechanical means of guarding crossings and am convinced that all such are either impracticable or untrustworthy. If the methods now being used are ineffective—and the amazing frequency of fatal accidents certainly proves that they are—what then? Shall we try something else, or shall we go on with the killings?

"My guard is intended for isolated crossings rather than for those on congested thoroughfares. In studying crossings with heavy traffic I find little inclination on the part of drivers to take chances. They accept the situation and govern themselves accordingly. But on free thoroughfares they pay little or no heed to signs, bells, and the like, maintaining the same speed as though no crossing was at hand—indeed, in many instances, as if they were wholly unconscious of their surroundings.

The inventor points out further that the absent-minded drivers, as well as the reckless and careless, must be safeguarded, and that for them a clear view of a railroad crossing and a wide, straight highway approaching it are little protection. They must be restrained. Mechanical and human guards are ineffectual and both are prohibitive in the expense of maintenance. Therefore, he argues, a prohibitive in the expense of maintenance Therefore, he argues, a part of the roadway must be constructed, as planned in his scheme, so that drivers must reduce their speed and thereby more closely note their surroundings.

"When they do that the battle is won," continues Mr. Banks. "Whether we like constricted sections in highways or not, a means to compel the application of brakes by those who should but will not do so of their oown free willl, must be devised. This can not be done by any system of warning but must be accomplished through a positive check, which is the fundamental principle of the guard I have devised."

The inventor does not go into the cost of his guard, but experts say that it would not be prohibitive if it were constructed at the same time the highway is being paved or built. There would be practically no maintenance cost.

Any county, city, or state has the permission of Mr. Banks to adopt and use hsi grade crossing guard.

CORONER HOLDS INQUEST HERE

Coroner George A. Arner conducted an inquest late yesterday afternoon into the death of Luther Burris, 36, mill worker, who ended his life by shooting himself with a shot gun in his home, 214 Litten street.

Later in the evening an autopsy was held by Drs. G. E. Lewis, J. L. Pyle and C. A. Shafer. Examination of the body disclosed that Burris, who, it is said, was despondent as a result of domestic troubles, placed the gun in his mouth and used the toes of his uncovered right foot to pull the trigger. The physicians found only one small concussion caused by the discharge of the gun.

The body is at the Arner funeral home where it is being held pending the arrival of relatives who reside near Fairmont and who are expected to reach here this afternoon.

On The Birth
Of a New Dawn

Before crossing the dividing line that marks the passing of a short period in our lives, we pause to think a moment.

The year just ending held a great deal for us. We feel we have grown broader in vision and stronger in spirit, and much, much richer in friends. And when we think of all the good this year brought to our city, we grow humble indeed.

Not of material gains that we are thinking, but rather of something many, many times more precious—the wonderful great friendship that you have given to each other and to us so freely.

Success measured in dollars or earthly possessions means but little. Long, long ago we found that out for ourselves—and everyone must find out for himself or else he will never know. That in the sum total of life it is the number of friends we make and hold that add to our happiness.

The Stein Store has become a near and dear part of this growing humming community; that you talk to each other of us with pride; that you look to us to participate in all public events, great or small. That we are privileged to be one of you. That you truly feel that in the busy hum of life we COUNT, makes us happy beyond expression.

Long years ago it became the super-ambition of Jacob Stein that this store become an institution of SERVICE—and thus far we have succeeded in a moderate way through our never ceasing efforts.

And with this thought uppermost in our minds we confidently and with stout hearts face the future before us, as it is, a vista clean and untrammelled, radiant with promise, ours to do with as we will.

From life's deep well we shall take out as much as we put into it. It is us who shape our own destinies. And, henceforth, spurred by past achievements we go forth by further improving our ways, by becoming more considerate, of more help and of more service to our fellow men.

So with the deepest and most sincere feeling we pass the old greeting:

and

CORONER HOLDS INQUEST HERE

Coroner George A. Arner conducted an inquest late yesterday afternoon into the death of Luther Burris, 36, mill worker, who ended his life by shooting himself with a shot gun in his home, 214 Litten street.

Later in the evening an autopsy was held by Drs. G. E. Lewis, J. L. Pyle and C. A. Shafer. Examination of the body disclosed that Burris, who, it is said, was despondent as a result of domestic troubles, placed the gun in his mouth and used the toes of his uncovered right foot to pull the trigger. The physicians found only one small concussion caused by the discharge of the gun.

The body is at the Arner funeral home where it is being held pending the arrival of relatives who reside near Fairmont and who are expected to reach here this afternoon.

On The Birth
Of a New Dawn

Before crossing the dividing line that marks the passing of a short period in our lives, we pause to think a moment.

The year just ending held a great deal for us. We feel we have grown broader in vision and stronger in spirit, and much, much richer in friends. And when we think of all the good this year brought to our city, we grow humble indeed.

Not of material gains that we are thinking, but rather of something many, many times more precious—the wonderful great friendship that you have given to each other and to us so freely.

Success measured in dollars or earthly possessions means but little. Long, long ago we found that out for ourselves—and everyone must find out for himself or else he will never know. That in the sum total of life it is the number of friends we make and hold that add to our happiness.

The Stein Store has become a near and dear part of this growing humming community; that you talk to each other of us with pride; that you look to us to participate in all public events, great or small. That we are privileged to be one of you. That you truly feel that in the busy hum of life we COUNT, makes us happy beyond expression.

Long years ago it became the super-ambition of Jacob Stein that this store become an institution of SERVICE—and thus far we have succeeded in a moderate way through our never ceasing efforts.

And with this thought uppermost in our minds we confidently and with stout hearts face the future before us, as it is, a vista clean and untrammelled, radiant with promise, ours to do with as we will.

TURKEY TREAT AT HOSPITAL

Christmas Spirit Also Prevails in City and County Jails.

Patients at the City hospital are to be treated to turkey, plum pudding and all the trimmings of a real Christmas dinner tomorrow.

"We are planning to make Christmas Day just as merry as possible for those who cannot be at home with their loved ones," Miss Bertha Miller, hospital superintendent, said this morning.

Turkey for the dinner was furnished by the Crockery City Ice and Products company. There will be nuts, oranges, candy and other delicacies for all those whose illness is not of a serious nature. Theh ospital population tomorrow will be between 35 and 40.

Interior of the hospital has been decorated in keeping with the Yuletide season, wreaths, tissue paper bells and similar decorations being used.

Chief of Police McDermott today announced that all prisoners in the city jail, except those charged with a serious offense, will be liberated either Christmas eve or Christmas morning in order to permit them to spend the day with friends. No special menu will be furnished those who might be in jail at noon unless it is sent by friends.

Something special in the line of "eats" is also to be handed out to prisoners in the county jail, but it won't be turkey, Mrs. George Wright, matron at the county jail, stated.

The meal will consist of hot roast pork and apple sauce. Friends of the prisoners furnished turkey for Thanksgiving and the same menu may prevail for New Year's day. Sheriff George Wright will pass out the "smokes" as his Christmas gift to those behind the cold walls of the county jail.

Three Firemen Die

BOSTON, Dec. 24.—Fifteen firemen were overcome early today during a four-alarm $65,000 fire which threatened to wipe out Boston's market district. The fire swept the six-story block where it originated.

Fred Young, one of the firemen, was overcome by smoke fumes.

James Callahan and Timothy Sullivan, two other firemen, fell exhausted in the building. Twelve others were carried from the blazing building into the open air.

A hero of the fire was Ralph Melzard, gas company employe. Braving fire, smoke and water, Melzard rushed through the building disconnecting the gas.

You can't tell what is going to happen when you buy a piece of land in America. Neither William H. Vanderbilt nor Cornelius Vanderbilt, now together in heaven, imagined that the land they bought for a trifle would more than pay for the palaces they put upon it.

HOLY YEAR COMES TO END TODAY

ROME, Dec. 24.—Holy year came to its traditional and official end today with the walling up of the sacred doors at St. Peter's and the patriarchial basilicas of St. John Lateran, St. Mary Major and St. Paul.

With the pope officiating in person at St. Peter's, the services were carried through with a symbolism and a pageantry which brought Catholic ceremonial near its apogee. The ritual of building up the holy doorway, which American pilgrims will remember as the one farthest to the right as St. Peter's, is approached from the plaza, was the distinctive feature of the ceremonies marking the concluding phase of the jubilee year.

The pope descended from the sedia gestatoria before the confessio where he knelt in prayer before the tomb of St. Peter. In the confessio with its 89 ever-burning lights not far from the spot where the pontiff prayed could be discerned the stately outline of another Pius—Pius VI, also kneeling, as immortalized by Antonio Canova in one of the world's great pieces of sculpture.

And today's ceremonial had another association with Pope Pius VI. for his successor, Pius XI, wore his predecessor's ring, presented to him this year by the Catholic Daughters of America. The ring was purchased by the American Catholic ladies from a family in Naples and the pope in writing his thanks to his children in the United States, told them he would wear the ring at this morning's exercises.

Four Held in Death

"Rowley, McKinnon, Dash and Carroll ran out to catch a car which was due, but missed the car and then went to Patterson's restaurant, where they had lunch. Later they boarded a westbound interurban street car and went to Steubenville."

According to Chief Fultz, Rowley explained that McKinnon got the $20 bill out of Devie's pocket and he gave it to Rowley. The bill, it is said, was subsequently "changed," and according to the story told the chief, was split between the pair.

Feit Effects of Liquor.

Carroll, McCinnon and Dash also were questioned, and, according to Chief Fultz, corroborated Rowley's purported confession. Each of the quartet, it is said, asserted that he felt the effects of the liquor they drank, although, in the opinion of police, they probably did not take the quantity that Devie did. They said that they were hardly able to eat and that their legs were affected, the police chief declared.

Folowing the questioning, the four youths were taken to the city jail where they were locked up.

According to police, the investigation, which got under way several hours after Devie's body had been discovered by Earl Densmore, of Wellsville, received its first impetus when residents near 1321 Main street said they saw the four men running for a car. One of the quartet was recognized and this led, susbequently, to establishing the identity of the others.

Ex-secretary of War Weeks Shaken up in Crash.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Dec. 24.—Ex-Secretary of War John W. Weeks, was slightly shaken up today in a head-on collision between the West Indian limited and the Havana special on the Atlantic Coast line railroad, near Monks Corner, South Carolina.

Weeks, accompanied by Mrs. Weeks, was returning home from a trip to South America. They were in the last car of the northbound train.

At least three men were dead, one missing, and several members of the crew injured.

FIREMAN C. BAXTER, of Florence, S. C.

A negro fireman named Williams is missing, and is believed to be buried beneath wreckage at the bottom of an embankment, according to telephone advices to Atlantic Coast Line headquarters in Charleston.

A relief train with doctors and nurses aboard has been dispatched from Charleston to the scene of the wreck.

The two tourist trains were loaded with holiday travelers. The passengers were badly shaken up and frightened.

The wreck was said to have been caused by failure of both engineers to observe red light stop signals placed at the beginning of a portion of single track.

Solons Hold Up Ordinance to Purchase Traffic Lights

Halt Action After Measure Transferring $2,500 to General Fund is Placed Upon First Reading.

An ordinance transferring $2,500 from the general fund to the safety fund to purchase "additional traffic lights and pay current bills for the balance of the present year," was held up by the city solons last evening, after being placed upon first reading, pending an investigation of an appropriation which is said to have been made several months ago for this purpose.

Councilmen Kerr, Farrall and Larcombe charged that the city was now being asked to pay a bill for approximately $800 for which money had been appropriated last June. It was explained that $1,000 of the $2,500 transfer, authorized last summer, was to meet the cost of the three street lights installed several months ago, and, according to Auditor McGraw, about $800 is needed to pay an outstanding bill for street lights.

Solon Farrall was the first to offer an objection to the measure, asserting that he was under the impression that money for the first three lights had been provided several months ago.

"The mayor asked us to appropriate $1,800 for the lights and the patrol, but we voted the safety department $2,500 for these improvements,' said Larcombe. "There is about $700 which is unaccounted for and I would like to know where it went."

Seek Explanation.

The ordinance was placed on first reading and passed without a dissenting vote. Clerk Shone produced his minutes and the ordinance, approved last June, providing for the transfer of money to the safety department for traffic lights.

"I am not opposed to installing additional lights but I would like to know where the money went that we originally provided," said Farrall.

Kerr also stated that he was in favor of placing further lights but would like to be informed about the money which already had been set aside for this purpose. "I will vote in favor of transferring enough money to buy the new lights but am opposed to making a transfer of $2,500 to pay an outstanding bill for the first three lights which we installed here," he said.

Councilman Chambers asserted that he did not believe that the money was spent illegally but that due to a delay in submitting a bill for the lights the money had probably been spent for some other purpose.

"Money that is set aside for one purpose cannot be legally spent for another purpose," retorted Farrall. "The state examiner is liable to call our attention to this when he inspects the auditor's books."

Council then, by a unanimous vote, decided to defer further consideration of the ordinance until the auditor is questioned regarding the first appropriation. An adjourned session will be held ne t Tuesday evening.

Pass Cap Ordinances.

A committee of business men from the Fourth and Market street district appeared before the solons in behalf of the new traffic lights, but failed to state their mission at the meeting. One of the two new lights will, in all probability, be placed at the corner of Fourth and Market streets, according to the plan of Chief of Police McDermott.

An ordinance, providing for the furnishing of caps and equipment for the members of the police department, was passed on third and final reading. Councilman Farrall alone opposed the legislation on final reading. Another ordinance, authorizing the purchase of caps for members of the fire department, introduced by Farrall and Kerr, was passed on three readings without a dissenting vote.

Another ordinance, amending that section of the traffic ordinance which makes Washington street, between Fourth and Fifth, a one-way traffic, was passed on three readings by a unanimous vote.

Councilman Larcombe opposed the change, but would not vote against the amendment. He charged that the intersection at Fifth and Washington street was one of the most dangerous in the business district inasmuch as street cars traversed all intersecting streets, while at Broadway, which is a much wider street than Washington, there was no tracks south of Fifth. The police department plans to prohibit left turns at the corner of Fifth street and Broadway as soon as Washington street is opened to two-way traffic. That part of the street between Fifth and Sixth streets remains open for north bound traffic only.

Fix Director's Bond.

An ordinance, fixing the bond of the service-safety director, who assumes office early in January, at $6,000, was passed on three readings. The ordinance was declared to be an emergency measure.

Councilman Kerr made a report on the cost of the Mulberry street culvert, built recently by the street department. The total cost was $628.77.

"The city saved about $500 on this job, enough to buy a concrete mixer," Kerr said. "The lowest estimate that we had was between $1,000 and $1,100. It might be well to thing over this saving on our street work.

Six Bandits Shoot One Man, Slug Aide And Seize $50,000

MOLLENAUER, Pa., Dec. 24.—Opening fire as they approached, six masked bandits today held up a party of five messengers of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal company and escaped with a Christmas payroll of $50,000.

The holdup, termed by police the most daring in Allegheny county in years, occurred a few miles outside of Pittsburgh, near the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal company's mine No. 2, between Mollenauer and Castle Shannon.

Real Christmas Assured in Hocking Valley Coal Fields

ATHENS, O., Dec. 24.—There will be a real Christmas in the Hocking Valley coal fields tomorrow.

And, for the little tots, Santa Claus will bring a full pack down the chimney for the first time in years.

Full plates and stockings were made possible for the humble miners' cottages when "pay day" was moved up 48 hours. Union miners usually draw their wages on the tenth and twenty-fifth of the month.

However, the added advantage of spending money for the Yuletide will not bring an elaborate display or extravagance to the "Valley." Relief workers say Christmas fare will be plain, although substantial and plentiful.

29,000 Telephone Calls Here Daily During Yule Season

East Liverpool's telephone calls have increased from 25,000 to 29,000 daily during the Christmas shopping season, according to Frank Swaney, commercial manager of the East Liverpool office of the Ohio Bell Telephone company. This represents an increase of approximately 15 per cent over the average for autumn.

Practically all of the extra calls during the week preceding and the week following the holiday, according to Swaney, originate in the homes and a large number are for department stores. Thousands of calls are made to extend Christmas and New Year's wishes.

Additional operators are employed to take care of the increased work. The surplus force is recruited from the ranks of former telephone operators, who have married or retired from service for other reasons.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—Speculative interest was concentrated in American Can, old and new stocks, in the early trading today, in view of the flood of market rumors that the "Insiders in Can" would carry out their program of pushing the stock to 300 "before the end of the year." The stock advanced quickly to 290¼ for a new 8 point gain in the first period, where a large volume of selling was encountered. The new stock, admitted to trading today, sold at 48¾, compared with the introductory price of 42 in the curb market last week.

Pacific Oil continued as the spectacular leader of the petroleum stocks, advancing nearly 3 points to a new high at 67½ in the first half hour in unusually heavy trading. Most of the Standard and independent oils in all markets sold at slightly higher prices.

With a three-day holiday looming for the stock markets and most of the commodity markets after the close today, shorts in many of the speculative industrial and specialty stocks were unusually active in covering up their outstanding contracts, and it was estimated in the financial district that more than half of today's transactions were for short account. Call money rates were unchanged at 6 per cent, with loans holding over until Monday.

TURKEY TREAT AT HOSPITAL

Christmas Spirit Also Prevails in City and County Jails.

Patients at the City hospital are to be treated to turkey, plum pudding and all the trimmings of a real Christmas dinner tomorrow.

"We are planning to make Christmas Day just as merry as possible for those who cannot be at home with their loved ones," Miss Bertha Miller, hospital superintendent, said this ...

Turkey for the dinner was furnished by the Crockery City Ice and Products company. There will be nuts, oranges, candy and other delicacies for all those whose illness is not of a serious nature. Theh ospital population tomorrow will be between 35 and 40.

Interior of the hospital has been decorated in keeping with the Yuletide season, wreaths, tissue paper bells and similar decorations being used.

Chief of Police McDermott today announced that all prisoners in the city jail, except those charged with a serious offense, will be liberated either Christmas eve or Christmas morning in order to permit them to spend the day with friends. No special menu will be furnished those who might be in jail at noon unless it is sent by friends.

Something special in the line of "eats" is also to be handed out to prisoners in the county jail, but it won't be turkey, Mrs. George Wright, matron at the county jail, stated.

The meal will consist of hot roast pork and apple sauce. Friends of the prisoners furnished turkey for Thanksgiving and the same menu may prevail for New Year's day. Sheriff George Wright will pass out the "smokes" as his Christmas gift to those behind the cold walls of the county jail.

BOSTON, Dec. 24.—Fifteen firemen were overcome early today during a four-alarm $65,000 fire which threatened to wipe out Boston's market district. The fire swept the six-story block where it originated.

James Callahan and Timothy Sullivan, two other firemen, fell exhausted in the building. Twelve others were carried from the blazing building into the open air.

A hero of the fire was Ralph Melzard, gas company employe. Braving fire, smoke and water, Melzard rushed through the building disconnecting the gas.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt inherited another Vanderbilt house, just above Mrs. White's. She sold that for seven and one-half millions to Mr. Heckscher, who will build a 42-story hotel on the site. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt also moves farther up Fifth avenue.

You can't tell what is going to happen when you buy a piece of land in America. Neither William H. Vanderbilt nor Cornelius Vanderbilt, now together in heaven, imagined that the land they bought for a trifle would more than pay for the palaces they put upon it.

Get land in America, take care of it, and rightly chosen, it will take care of you.

HOLY YEAR COMES TO END TODAY

ROME, Dec. 24.—Holy year came to its traditional and official end today with the walling up of the sacred doors at St. Peter's and the patriarchal basilicas of St. John Lateran, St. Mary Major and St. Paul.

With the pope officiating in person at St. Peter's, the services were carried through with a symbolism and a pageantry which brought Catholic ceremonial near its apogee. The ritual of building up the holy doorway, which American pilgrims will remember as the one farthest to the right as St. Peter's, is approached from the plaza, was the distinctive feature of the ceremonies marking the concluding phase of the jubilee year.

The pope descended from the sedia gestatoria before the confessio where he knelt in prayer before the tomb of St. Peter. In the confessio with its 89 ever-burning lights not far from the spot where the pontiff prayed could be discerned the stately outline of another Pius—Pius VI, also kneeling, as immortalized by Antonio Canova in one of the world's great pieces of sculpture.

And today's ceremonial had another association with Pope Pius VI. for his successor, Pius XI, wore his predecessor's ring, presented to him this year by the Catholic Daughters of America. The ring was purchased by the American Catholic ladies from a family in Naples and the pope in writing his thanks to his children in the United States, told them he would wear the ring at this morning's exercises.

Four Held in Death

"Rowley, McKinnon, Dash and Carroll ran out to catch a car which was due, but missed the car and then went to Patterson's restaurant, where they had lunch. Later they boarded a westbound interurban street car and went to Steubenville."

According to Chief Fultz, Rowley explained that McKinnon got the $20 bill out of Devie's pocket and he gave it to Rowley. The bill, it is said, was subsequently "changed," and according to the story told the chief, was split between the pair.

Felt Effects of Liquor.

Carroll, McCinnon and Dash also were questioned, and, according to Chief Fultz, corroborated Rowley's purported confession. Each of the quartet, it is said, asserted that he felt the effects of the liquor they drank, although, in the opinion of police, they probably did not take the quantity that Devie did. They said that they were hardly able to eat and that their legs were affected, the police chief declared.

Folowing the questioning, the four youths were taken to the city jail where they were locked up.

According to police, the investigation, which got under way several hours after Devie's body had been discovered by Earl Densmore, of Wellsville, received its first impetus when residents near 1321 Main street said they saw the four men running for a car. One of the quartet was recognized and this led, susbequently, to establishing the identity of the others.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Dec. 24.—Ex-Secretary of War John W. Weeks, was slightly shaken up today in a head on collision between the West Indian limited and the Havana special on the Atlantic Coast line railroad, near Monks Corner, South Carolina.

Weeks, accompanied by Mrs. Weeks, was returning home from a trip to South America. They were in the last car of the northbound train.

At least three men were dead, one missing, and several members of the crew injured.

FIREMAN C. BAXTER, of Florence, S. C.

A negro fireman named Williams is missing, and is believed to be buried beneath wreckage at the bottom of an embankment, according to telephone advices to Atlantic Coast Line headquarters in Charleston.

A relief train with doctors and nurses aboard has been dispatched from Charleston to the scene of the wreck.

The two tourist trains were loaded with holiday travelers. The passengers were badly shaken up and frightened.

The wreck was said to have been caused by failure of both engineers to observe red light stop signals placed at the beginning of a portion of single track.

Solons Hold Up Ordinance to Purchase Trattic Lights

Halt Action After Measure Transferring $2,500 to General Fund is Placed Upon First Reading.

An ordinance transferring $2,500 from the general fund to the safety fund to purchase "additional traffic lights and pay current bills for the balance of the present year," was held up by the city solons last evening, after being placed upon first reading, pending an investigation of an appropriation which is said to have been made several months ago for this purpose.

Councilmen Kerr, Farrall and Larcombe charged that the city was now being asked to pay a bill for approximately $800 for which money had been appropriated last June. It was explained that $1,000 of the $2,500 transfer, authorized last summer, was to meet the cost of the three street lights installed several months ago, and, according to Auditor McGraw, about $800 is needed to pay an outstanding bill for street lights.

Solon Farrall was the first to offer an objection to the measure, asserting that he was under the impression that money for the first three lights had been provided several months ago.

"The mayor asked us to appropriate $1,800 for the lights and the patrol, but we voted the safety department $2,500 for these improvements,' said Larcombe. "There is about $700 which is unaccounted for and I would like to know where it went."

Seek Explanation.

The ordinance was placed on first reading and passed without a dissenting vote. Clerk Shone produced his minutes and the ordinance, approved last June, providing for the transfer of money to the safety department for traffic lights.

"I am not opposed to installing additional lights but I would like to know where the money went that we originally provided," said Farrall.

Kerr also stated that he was in favor of placing further lights but would like to be informed about the money which already had been set aside for this purpose. "I will vote in favor of transferring enough money to buy the new lights but am opposed to making a transfer of $2,500 to pay an outstanding bill for the first three lights which we installed here," he said.

Councilman Chambers asserted that he did not believe that the money was spent illegally but that due to a delay in submitting a bill for the lights the money had probably been spent for some other purpose.

"Money that is set aside for one purpose cannot be legally spent for another purpose," retorted Farrall. "The state examiner is liable to call our attention to this when he inspects the auditor's books."

Council then, by a unanimous vote, decided to defer further consideration of the ordinance until the auditor is questioned regarding the first appropriation. An adjourned session will be held ne t Tuesday evening.

Pass Cap Ordinances.

A committee of business men from the Fourth and Market street district appeared before the solons in behalf of the new traffic lights, but failed to state their mission at the meeting. One of the two new lights will, in all probability, be placed at the corner of Fourth and Market streets, according to the plan of Chief of Police McDermott.

An ordinance, providing for the furnishing of caps and equipment for the members of the police department, was passed on third and final reading. Councilman Farrall alone opposed the legislation on final reading. Another ordinance, authorizing the purchase of caps for members of the fire department, introduced by Farrall and Kerr, was passed on three readings without a dissenting vote.

Another ordinance, amending that section of the traffic ordinance which makes Washington street, between Fourth and Fifth, a one-way traffic, was passed on three readings by a unanimous vote.

Councilman Larcombe opposed the change, but would not vote against the amendment. He charged that the interesection at Fifth and Washington street was one of the most dangerous in the business district inasmuch as street cars traversed all intersecting streets, while at Broadway, which is a much wider street than Washington, there was no tracks south of Fifth. The police department plans to prohibit left turns at the corner of Fifth street and Broadway as soon as Washington street is opened to two-way traffic. That part of the street between Fifth and Sixth streets remains open for north bound traffic only.

Fix Director's Bond.

An ordinance, fixing the bond of the service-safety director, who assumes office early in January, at $6,000, was passed on three readings. The ordinance was declared to be an emergency measure.

Councilman Kerr made a report on the cost of the Mulberry street culvert, built recently by the street department. The total cost was $628.77.

"The city saved about $500 on this job, enough to buy a concrete mixer," Kerr said. "The lowest estimate that we had was between $1,000 and $1,100. It might be well to thing over this saving on our street work.

Six Bandits Shoot One Man, Slug Aide And Seize $50,000

MOLLENAUER, Pa., Dec. 24.—Opening fire as they approached, six masked bandits today held up a party of five messengers of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal company and escaped with a Christmas payroll of $50,000.

The holdup, termed by police the most daring in Allegheny county in years, occurred a few miles outside of Pittsburgh, near the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal company's mine No. 2, between Mollenauer and Castle Shannon.

Real Christmas Assured in Hocking Valley Coal Fields

ATHENS, O., Dec. 24.—There will be a real Christmas in the Hocking Valley coal fields tomorrow.

And, for the little tots, Santa Claus will bring a full pack down the chimney for the first time in years.

Full plates and stockings were made possible for the humble miners' cottages when "pay day" was moved up 48 hours. Union miners usually draw their wages on the tenth and twenty-fifth of the month.

However, the added advantage of spending money for the Yuletide will not bring an elaborate display or extravagance to the "Valley." Relief workers say Christmas fare will be plain, although substantial and plentiful.

29,000 Telephone Calls Here Daily During Yule Season

East Liverpool's telephone calls have increased from 25,000 to 29,000 daily during the Christmas shopping season, according to Frank Swaney, commercial manager of the East Liverpool office of the Ohio Bell Telephone company. This represents an increase of approximately 15 per cent over the average for autumn.

Practically all of the extra calls during the week preceding and the week following the holiday, according to Swaney, originate in the homes and a large number are for department stores. Thousands of calls are made to extend Christmas and New Year's wishes.

Additional operators are employed to take care of the increased work. The surplus force is recruited from the ranks of former telephone operators, who have married or retired from service for other reasons.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—Speculative interest was concentrated in American Can, old and new stocks, in the early trading today, in view of the flood of market rumors that the "insiders in Can" would carry out their program of pushing the stock to 300 "before the end of the year." The stock advanced quickly to 290¼ for a new 8 point gain in the first period, where a large volume of selling was encountered. The new stock, admitted to trading today, sold at 48¾, compared with the introductory price of 42 in the curb market last week.

Pacific Oil continued as the spectacular leader of the petroleum stocks, advancing nearly 3 points to a new high at 67¼ in the first half hour in unusually heavy trading. Most of the Standard and independent oils in all markets sold at slightly higher prices.

With a three-day holiday looming for the stock markets and most of the commodity markets after the close today, shorts in many of the speculative industrial and specialty stocks were unusually active in covering up their outstanding contracts, and it was estimated in the financial district that more than half of today's transactions were for short account. Call money rates were unchanged at 6 per cent, with loans holding over until Monday.

SPORTSMEN TO HAVE BIG YEAR

Distribution of Game Big Item on 1926 Card.

Randall Hamilton of Lisbon, president of Columbiana's Izaak Walton league, has been advised by D. O. Thompson, chief of the state disvision of fish and game, that it is the intention of the department to make 1926 the banner year for all sportsmen in Ohio who "love to hunt and fish."

"The department contemplates propagating from 8,000 to 10,000 rabbits that they may be distributed at the proper time in different counties where there has been a scarcity of rabbits in the past," Mr. Hamilton has been advised by Mr. Thompson.

"We also are now operating two large pheasant farms and are expecting to raise during the coming year 25,000 young pheasants which will be distributed proportionately in each of the 88 counties in Ohio.

"The department contemplates building two new fish hatcheries in addition to the four that were started in 1935. Extensive improvements have been started on our eight inland hatcheries, and each hatchery will be so improved that we may increase the propagation of fish in 1926.

"It is the department's ambition to make Ohio one of the greatest states in the union for the sportsmen, and we are asking all sportsmen to cooperate with the department in order that we may reach this goal."

Construction of the fish hatchery in Hanover township at Guilford is expected to be under way during the cominy year, according to advices Mr. Hamilton has received from Columbus. Money is now available for the purchase of the 400 odd acres for the new state park in this county.

School Grid Players Given Gold Emblems

Miniature Footballs Presented to 19 Letter Men by Country Club Sports Committee in Recognition of Team's Title Achievement.

Solid gold footballs, miniature replicas of the pigskin which they toted to a championship this year over Columbiana county scholastic elevens, were awarded to 19 letter men of the high school grid team by the sports committee of the East Liverpool Country club at special Christmas exercises yesterday afternoon in the high school auditorium.

In recognition of their achievement on the gridirons of the county during hte season which recently closed, the country club sports committee presented the gold emblems as tangible evidence of a successful season under the guidance of Coach O. V. Boone.

The presentation was made by W. E. Wells, Jr., former East Liverpool high school athlete and gridiron star at Bethany college. Wells is chairman of the country club sports committee. He lauded the efforts of the Blue and White in their climb to season's honors and voiced the wish of the club as a whole that there be many more seasons like it.

In addition, gold footballs were presented to Coach O. V. Boone and Assistant Coach George Kidder, and the two managers, Dawson and Breakstone.

Football letters were also awarded during the exercises. In connection with the presentations of the "L" to each of the men who qualified during the recent campaign, Assistant Coach Kidder handed out certificates denoting that the recipient had merited the honor awarded him by his performance on the gridiron during 1925.

Apparently fit as the proverbial fiddle, with the exception of a slight limp in the leg which he injured last season at Patterson Field, Ralph Schaffer, one of the big cogs in Coach Boone's Blue and White grid machine preceding the unfortunate occurrence, yesterday afternoon stepped up to the platform to receive his football letter and miniature gold football.

Schaffer will be able to play football next year, if he so desires, physicians have informed Coach Bcone.

And no less a person than the grid star himself asserts emphatically that he's going to play.

It was at first feared that Schaffer would be out of the game for all time and that the injury would visibly affect the use of his leg But constant care and skillful surgery have apparently worked a miracle in restoring to the youth the use of the member.

POLISHES OFF EASTERN BOXER IN 6-ROUNDER

McTigue Given Decision Over Tiger Flowers.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—New York, long a prey to a sardonic suspicion that Frankie Genaro was really the greatest flyweight in the world, read its answer in the stars last night. One of them was Fidel La Barba, of Los Angeles. Lew Perfetti, his opponent in the real feature bout of the annual Christmas fund show, saw the others.

This community admits no official recognition of La Barba as champion flyweight of the world because the young man is under the local age limit but the customers can and did draw their own conclusions. After watching Fidel give Perfetti, a bantamweight, a shellacking in six rounds, they knew beyond the peradventure of a doubt that La Barba had beaten Genaro on the plumb-bob level.

On what he uncovered last night, he is one of the greatest champions of the day and age, better than Pancho Villa and comparable with Jimmy Wilde, Johnny Coulon, Jimmy Barry and other immortals who held the title before him.

It was the night before Christmas eve and Santa Claus rode into town on a boxing glove, the gate having been estimated at around $50,000, on which the fighters cut fifty-fifty.

Approve His Title.

The glove held a present of four fingers and a thumb and Perfetti got all of them before the end of the sixth round, which he was fortunate to survive. He started like a winner, at that. He took the first two rounds, scoring a short knockdown with a left hook to the jaw in the opener. But after the second, he took a lot of other things and most of them on the jaw.

"Shall I introduce him as the champion." Joe Humphries asked James F. Farley, commission chairman, gefore the bout.

"That's what he is, isn't he?" was the reply, and it was so ordered.

Mr. Humphries was in great voice and gained a clean cut decision in the Mike McTigue-Tiger Flowers bout, the tacit but undeserved headliner of the show.

Just what a former veteran may be must remain something of a mystery but if McTigue is it, the writer must advocate that all remaining survivors of the type be hunted down and thrown out the window.

Flowers Forces Fighting.

It being the season of universal gifts, the officials allowed that McTigue had earned the decision over Flowers at the end of ten rounds. It was one of those verdicts that they pull out of the hat with the bowl of goldfish. McTigue only gained one distinction. He didn't make an error. He caught everything.

Flowers forced the fighting, of necessity, landed three blows to one and messed up Michael in general. The latter had the colored man in a bad way several times with hard right uppercuts but didn't seem to care to do much about it.

He could have absorbed a valuable lesson in the matter of developing a fighting heart had he watched La Bara in the preceeding bout. Fidel went into the third round a well outscored champion and some of the premature pall bearers in the gallery had begun to make caustic remarks. But, apparently, they hadn't seen the real La Bara emerge from under his wraps.

La Barba Has Everything.

Vastly encouraged, our young man went crazy in the second and hooked Fidel about like an amateur, the latter having no adequate reply to the kangaroo style of his opponent. Perfetti also jumped high in the air at the outset of the next round, but he didn't forget to come down. A left to the jaw and body reminded him.

The body punch, in fact, just about wound up the jumping competition for the evening. Badly hurt, Perfetti was driven into a corner and took a thoroughgoing beating. Later, a left to the jaw staggered him.

The fourth was slow but went to La Barba by a shade, while the fifth was fast and went the same way, Fidel making a mess out of his man with a lefts and rights to every spot the law allowed. He did the same in the sixth, almost dropping Lew with a left to the chin and needing only another clean punch to finish it when the bell rang.

La Barba proved he had everything —speed, boxing skill, the punch, tireless aggressiveness and the ability to laugh off a punch. He might have had more but there was nothing else.

Last Night's Fights

At Philadelphia—Dave Adelman, Philadelphia, won the judges' decision over Marty Gold, Philadelphia, ten rounds. Nick Clausen, Philadelphia and Roene Rogers, Philadelphia, fought eight rounds to a draw. Johnny Demarco, Philadelphia, gained the referee's decision over Joe Carlo, Philadelphia, six rounds. Gabe Marcello, Philadelphia, stopped Tim O'Hara, Philadelphia, in first round. Billy Squires, Philadelphia, scored a technical knockout over Joe Buck in the fourth round.

At Warren, Pa.—Jimmy Slattery, Buffalo, knocked out Indian Joe Burke in the third round of a ten round go. Ray Collins, Warren, awarded decision over Joe Bagley, Jamestown, N. Y., six rounds. Cliff Becker, Celoron, N. Y., knocked out Tommy Dillon, of Buffalo, in third round of six round bout. Hank Jarvis, of Dunkirk, and Kid Kelly, of Jamestown, draw.

At Kansas City, Kansas—Andre Anderson, Chicago heavyweight, knocked out Wayne (Big) Munn, former wrestler, in the first round of a 10-round go.

Joe Ciro, Kansas City lightweight, drew with Blas Rodriguez of Mexico, 10 rounds. Battling Silva, of Trinidad, Colo., won on points over Larry Cappo, Kansas City, eight rounds.

SCHAEFER SET FOR RETURN MATCH

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—Jake Schaefer, who recently lost the world's 18.2 balk line billiard title to Edouard Horemans, of Belgium, by five points, will leave today for Chicago where, beginning January 4, he will play Horemans a return match of 1,500 points for the championship. Present plans call for the ex-champion to make the trip to Chicago by automobile with frequent stops en route for practice.

The return match was made possible by Schaefer's threat to withdraw in the middle of the first one, unless Horemans granted him another chance within 30 days in case the Belgian won. A decision rendered against Schaefer by Referee Lewis was the cause of this unusual demand. The belief held here is that Schaefer will enter the second match a favorite.

Rosenblums Beat Bruins.

CHICAGO, Dec. 24.—The Chicago Bruins today were the deposed leaders of the American professional basketball league, following their 41 to 34 defeat at the hands of the Cleveland Rosenblums here last night. Play was closed and distance shots featured.

NEW YORK.—Against the protest of several affiliated clubs the A. A. U. announced it will insist upon handling the schedules and the financial affairs of all the foreign athletes who come here this winter. The Millrose A. A. of New York and the Illinois A. C. of Chicago are squabbling about the first appearance of several stars who are now on their way here.

Bid for Hudkins Bout.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 24.—Promoters were bidding today for a bout between Ace Hudkins, Nebraska, lightweight, and holder of the Pacific coast title, and Lou Paluso, Salt Lake City boxer, following Paluso's victory here last night after ten rounds of hard milling over Tommy O'Brien, New Yorker.

FRACTIONAL RACES TABOO

At a meeting of the North East Ohio Fair Circuit held at Youngstown, a resolution was adopted opposing fractional mile races during the fair season next fall, and this will be presented at a meeting of the Ohio Fair association which will convene for three days at the Neil house, Columbus, Jan. 12-14. During the last few years some of the fair boards in this association have been featuring fractional mile events which have not proved satisfactorily, either to race horse owners, the public or the fair managers. An effort is to be made to have the Ohio Fair association adopt a similar resolution, and should this happen, then all fractional mile races during the next Ohio season will be eliminated from the cards.

Fairs for the next season as announced by the North Eastern Ohio association are as follows:

Ashtabula county at Jefferson, Aug. 17-20.

Trumbull county at Warren, Aug. 30-31, Sept. 1.

Mahoning county at Canfield Sept. 4-6.

Columbiana county at Lisbon, Sept. 14-15-16.

East Palestine, Independent, Sept. 7-9.

Kinsman, Independent, Aug. 24-26.

The association has decided that the race card for the coming season will consist of three events daily such as the 2:24, 2:19 and 2:15 trot and 2:25, 2:19 and 2:12 or free-for-all pace.

An entrance fee of $10 will be charged by all fair boards during the coming season for every horse entered with no deductions of other allowances.

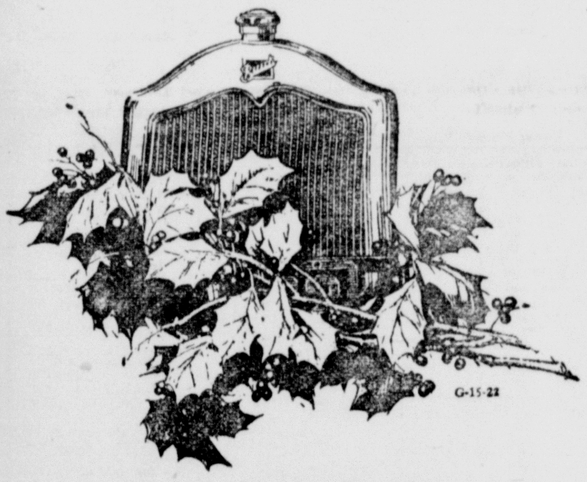

It has also been determined that the name of the horse and the driver for every race must be filed with the secretary of the fair association at or before 6 o'clock the evening previous to the day the horse is to race.

For the sixth term, O. R. Beckwith of Ashtabula has been elected president of the North Eastern Ohio Fair Circuit and Harry E. Marsden of Lisbon, secretary.

World's Richest Race

NEW YORK.—The Futurity of 1926 is expected to be the richest race in the world and probably will carry a gross value of more than $100,000, according to calculations by Victor L. Schaumberg, racing secretary at Belmont Park, who announced yesterday that nominations for the classic will close at the offices of the Westchester Racing association on Jan. 6, 1926. More than 1,800 nominations are expected for the Futurity, a record number.

Flyweight LaBarba Called Greatest Champ of Day and Age

SPORTSMEN TO HAVE BIG YEAR

Distribution of Game Big Item on 1926 Card.

Randall Hamilton of Lisbon, president of Columbiana's Izaak Walton league, has been advised by D. O. Thompson, chief of the state disvision of fish and game, that it is the intention of the department to make 1926 the banner year for all sportsmen in Ohio who "love to hunt and fish."

"The department contemplates propagating from 8,000 to 10,000 rabbits that they may be distributed at the proper time in different counties where there has been a scarcity of rabbits in the past," Mr. Hamilton has been advised by Mr. Thompson.

"We also are now operating two large pheasant farms and are expecting to raise during the coming year 25,000 young pheasants which will be distributed proportionately in each of the 88 counties in Ohio.

"The department contemplates building two new fish hatcheries in addition to the four that were started in 1925. Extensive improvements have been started on our eight inland hatcheries, and each hatchery will be so improved that we may increase the propagation of fish in 1926.

"It is the department's ambition to make Ohio one of the greatest states in the union for the sportsmen, and we are asking all sportsmen to cooperate with the department in order that we may reach this goal."

Construction of the fish hatchery in Hanover township at Guilford is expected to be under way during the cominy year, according to advices Mr. Hamilton has received from Columbus. Money is now available for the purchase of the 400 odd acres for the new state park in this county.

School Grid Players Given Gold Emblems

Miniature Footballs Presented to 19 Letter Men by Country Club Sports Committee in Recognition of Team's Title Achievement.

Solid gold footballs, miniature replicas of the pigskin which they toted to a championship this year over Columbiana county scholastic elevens, were awarded to 19 letter men of the high school grid team by the sports committee of the East Liverpool Country club at special Christmas exercises yesterday afternoon in the high school auditorium.

In recognition of their achievement on the gridirons of the county during hte season which recently closed, the country club sports committee presented the gold emblems as tangible evidence of a successful season under the guidance of Coach O. V. Boone.

The presentation was made by W. E. Wells, Jr., former East Liverpool high school athlete and gridiron star at Bethany college. Wells is chairman of the country club sports committee. He lauded the efforts of the Blue and White in their climb to season's honors and voiced the wish of the club as a whole that there be many more seasons like it.

In addition, gold footballs were presented to Coach O. V. Boone and Assistant Coach George Kidder, and the two managers, Dawson and Breakstone.

Football letters were also awarded during the exercises. In connection with the presentations of the "L" to each of the men who qualified during the recent campaign, Assistant Coach Kidder handed out certificates denoting that the recipient had merited the honor awarded him by his performance on the gridiron during 1925.

Apparently fit as the proverbial fiddle, with the exception of a slight limp in the leg which he injured last season at Patterson Field, Ralph Schaffer, one of the big cogs in Coach Boone's Blue and White grid machine preceding the unfortunate occurrence, yesterday afternoon stepped up to the platform to receive his football letter and miniature gold football.

Schaffer will be able to play football next year, if he so desires, physicians have informed Coach Boone.

And no less a person than the grid star himself asserts emphatically that he's going to play.

It was at first feared that Schaffer would be out of the game for all time and that the injury would visibly affect the use of his leg But constant care and skillful surgery have apparently worked a miracle in restoring to the youth the use of the member.

SCHAEFER SET FOR RETURN MATCH

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—Jake Schaefer, who recently lost the world's 18.2 balk line billiard title to Edouard Horemans, of Belgium, by five points, will leave today for Chicago where, beginning January 4, he will play Horemans a return match of 1,500 points for the championship. Present plans call for the ex-champion to make the trip to Chicago by automobile with frequent stops en route for practice.

The return match was made possible by Schaefer's threat to withdraw in the middle of the first one, unless Horemans granted him another chance within 30 days in case the Belgian won. A decision rendered against Schaefer by Referee Lewis was the cause of this unusual demand. The belief held here is that Schaefer will enter the second match a favorite.

Rosenblums Beat Bruins.

CHICAGO, Dec. 24.—The Chicago Bruins today were the deposed leaders of the American professional basketball league, following their 41 to 34 defeat at the hands of the Cleveland Rosenblums here last night. Play was closed and distance shots featured.

POLISHES OFF EASTERN BOXER IN 6-ROUNDER

McTigue Given Decision Over Tiger Flowers.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—New York, long a prey to a sardonic suspicion that Frankie Genaro was really the greatest flyweight in the world, read its answer in the stars last night. One of them was Fidel La Barba, of Los Angeles. Lew Perfetti, his opponent in the real feature bout of the annual Christmas fund show, saw the others.

This community admits no official recognition of La Barba as champion flyweight of the world because the young man is under the local age limit but the customers can and did draw their own conclusions. After watching Fidel give Perfetti, a bantamweight, a shellacking in six rounds, they knew beyond the peradventure of a doubt that La Barba had beaten Genaro on the plumb-bob level.

On what he uncovered last night, he is one of the greatest champions of the day and age, better than Pancho Villa and comparable with Jimmy Wilde, Johnny Coulon, Jimmy Barry and other immortals who held the title before him.

It was the night before Christmas eve and Santa Claus rode into town on a boxing glove, the gate having been estimated at around $50,000, on which the fighters cut fifty-fifty.

Approve His Title.

The glove held a present of four fingers and a thumb and Perfetti got all of them before the end of the sixth round, which he was fortunate to survive. He started like a winner, at that. He took the first two rounds, scoring a short knockdown with a left hook to the jaw in the opener. But after the second, he took a lot of other things and most of them on the jaw.

"Shall I introduce him as the champion." Joe Humphries asked James E. Farley, commission chairman, gefore the bout.

"That's what he is, isn't he?" was the reply, and it was so ordered.

Mr. Humphries was in great voice and gained a clean cut decision in the Mike McTigue-Tiger Flowers bout, the tacit but undeserved headliner of the show.

Just what a former veteran may be must remain something of a mystery but if McTigue is it, the writer must advocate that all remaining survivors of the type be hunted down and thrown out the window.

Flowers Forces Fighting.

It being the season of universal gifts, the officials allowed that McTigue had earned the decision over Flowers at the end of ten rounds. It was one of those verdicts that they pull out of the hat with the bowl of goldfish. McTigue only gained one distinction. He didn't make an error. He caught everything.

Flowers forced the fighting, of necessity, landed three blows to one and messed up Michael in general. The latter had the colored man in a bad way several times with hard right uppercuts but didn't seem to care to do much about it.

He could have absorbed a valuable lesson in the matter of developing a fighting heart had he watched La Bara in the preceeding bout. Fidel went into the third round a well outscored champion and some of the premature pall bearers in the gallery had begun to make caustic remarks. But, apparently, they hadn't seen the real La Bara emerge from under his wraps.

La Barba Has Everything.

Vastly encouraged, our young man went crazy in the second and hooked Fidel about like an amateur, the latter having no adequate reply to the kangaroo style of his opponent. Perfetti also jumped high in the air at the outset of the next round, but he didn't forget to come down. A left to the jaw and body reminded him.

The body punch, in fact, just about wound up the jumping competition for the evening. Badly hurt, Perfetti was driven into a corner and took a thoroughgoing beating. Later, a left to the jaw staggered him.

The fourth was slow but went to La Barba by a shade, while the fifth was fast and went the same way, Fidel making a mess out of his man with a lefts and rights to every spot the law allowed. He did the same in the sixth, almost dropping Lew with a left to the chin and needing only another clean punch to finish it when the bell rang.

La Barba proved he had everything—speed, boxing skill, the punch, tireless aggressiveness and the ability to laugh off a punch. He might have had more but there was nothing else.

Smith is Recovering

PHILADELPHIA.—Andy Smith, head football coach at the University of California, confined at the University hospital with pneumonia, was reported out of danger today. He has been resting easily and his complete recovery is expected.

Results of Gotham's Christmas Fights

George Godfrey, Philadelphia, got he decision over Martin Burke, New Orleans, ten rounds. Ernie Jarvis, England, and Corporal Izzy Schwartz, New York, fought a draw, ten rounds.

Will Direct Visitors

NEW YORK.—Against the protest of several affiliated clubs the A. A. U. announced it will insist upon handling the schedules and the financial affairs of all the foreign athletes who come here this winter. The Milrose A. A. of New York and the Illinois A. C. of Chicago are squabbling about the first appearance of several stars who are now on their way here.

Bid for Hudkins Bout.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 24.—Promoters were bidding today for a bout between Ace Hudkins, Nebraska, lightweight, and holder of the Pacific coast title, and Lou Paluso, Salt Lake City boxer, following Paluso's victory here last night after ten rounds of hard milling over Tommy O'Brien, New Yorker.

FRACTIONAL RACES TABOO

At a meeting of the North East Ohio Fair Circuit held at Youngstown, a resolution was adopted opposing fractional mile races during the fair season next fall, and this will be presented at a meeting of the Ohio Fair association which will convene for three days at the Neil house, Columbus, Jan. 12-14. During the last few years some of the fair boards in this association have been featuring fractional mile events which have not proved satisfactorily, either to race horse owners, the public or the fair managers. An effort is to be made to have the Ohio Fair association adopt a similar resolution, and should this happen, then all fractional mile races during the next Ohio season will be eliminated from the cards.

Fairs for the next season as announced by the North Eastern Ohio association are as follows:

Ashtabula county at Jefferson, Aug. 17-20.

Trumbull county at Warren, Aug. 30-31, Sept. 1.

Mahoning county at Canfield Sept. 4-6.

Columbiana county at Lisbon, Sept. 14-15-16.

East Palestine, Independent, Sept. 7-9.

Kinsman, Independent, Aug. 24-26.

The association has decided that the race card for the coming season will consist of three events daily such as the 2:24, 2:19 and 2:15 trot and 2:25, 2:19 and 2:12 or free-for-all pace.

An entrance fee of $10 will be charged by all fair boards during the coming season for every horse entered with no deductions of other allowances.

It has also been determined that the name of the horse and the driver for every race must be filed with the secretary of the fair association at or before 6 o'clock the evening previous to the day the horse is to race.

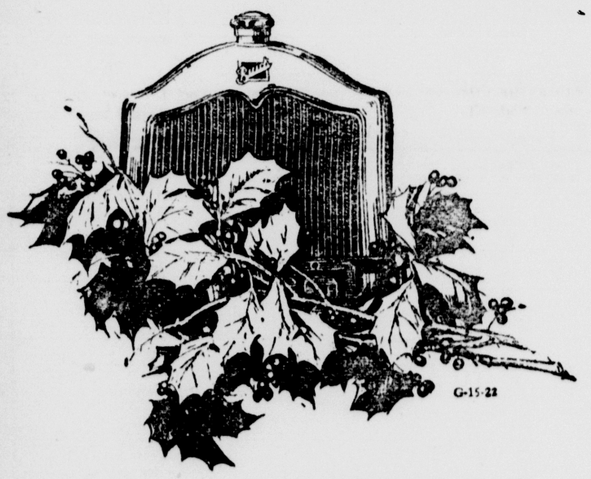

For the sixth term, O. R. Beckwith of Ashtabula has been elected president of the North Eastern Ohio Fair Circuit and Harry E. Marsden of Lisbon, secretary.

World's Richest Race

NEW YORK.—The Futurity of 1926 is expected to be the richest race in the world and probably will carry a gross value of more than $100,000, according to calculations by Victor L. Schaumberg, racing secretary at Belmont Park, who announced yesterday that nominations for the classic will close at the offices of the Westchester Racing association on Jan. 6, 1926. More than 1,800 nominations are expected for the Futurity, a record number.

THREE KINGS BOW TO LONE QUEEN

IN REVIEW OF 1925 TENNIS ACTIVITIES

By NORMAN E. BROWN.

Three kings usually make a hard hand to beat, but I believe that the successes of Miss Helen Wills, queen of American tennis, in 1925, far exceed those of the three kings, Bill Tilden, Bill Johnston and Vincent Richards.

Miss Wills started off the major tournament season with her invasion of England in quest of the Wimbledon title, emblematic of the world's tennis championship. Unused to foreign playing conditions she fell before the brilliant playing of Kathleen McKane, England's highest ranking player.

Returning to this country, Miss Wills relished the prospect of meeting Miss McKane and her British sisters again in the Wightman trophy matches which were staged in August. While America failed to turn back the British invaders Miss Wills' play was the spectacular event of the matches. Meeting Miss McKane again she defeated the British maid 6-1, 1-6, 9-7.

However, even the closest admirers of Miss Wills feared for her national title, held for two years, when Miss Elizabeth Ryan, American player returning to this country after 13 years in European play, defeated the California maid in the Seabright tourney.

Both Miss McKane and Miss Ryan were entered in the National tourney, as also was Miss Joan Fry, 18-year-old miss, given second ranking in British tennis.

Miss McKane Defeats Miss Ryan.

Unfortunately Miss Wills did not get to meet both Miss McKane and Miss Ryan. The latter rivals met, however, in the earlier rounds, and Miss McKane showed her superiority over the veteran star.

Miss Wills, in an earlier round, defeated Mrs. May Sutton Bundy. But Miss Fry's victory over Mrs. Bundy was equally impressive. Miss Wills then met Miss Fry and in decisive manner turned back the younger challenger.

The semi finals, however, found Miss McKane paired with Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, seven times national champ, and Miss Wills facing Eleanor Goss.

Miss McKane defeated the Norwegian miss two out of three sets, while Miss Wills trounced Miss Goss.

Then in the finals the two young stars—the best that England and America boast—met and fought it out, Miss Wills winning 3-6, 6-0, 6-2.

Truly a wonderful showing for a girl of Miss Wills' age and comparatively short tournament experience despite the fact that she has now ruled the U. S. courts three years.

Tilden Still Tilden.

With Tilden in the men's ranks it was different. The public has come to believe Tilden can go on forever in tennis.

He proved that in the national singles, in winning that tourney the sixth consecutive time. And he proved it in turning back Jean Borotra, dashing driver of the French team, in the Davis cup challenge round to help America retain the cup.

Bill Johnston was a more spectacular figure in some ways.

Faced with the prospect of being omitted from the Davis cup singles consideration, Johnston agreed to meet Vincent Richards, his rival, in a test match. His victory in five sets did not satisfy the tourney officials so a second trial match was arranged. In this Johnston proved his superiority by defeating Richards in three straight sets, 6-3, 6-4, 7-5.

As a result of these tests Richards was paired with Williams in the doubles and Johnston and Tilden met Rene Lacoste and Borotra in the singles. Victories in the first two singles matches and in the doubles gave America a sweeping victory in the cup play.

The elimination of the Australian netters by France in the preliminary play for the cup was an interesting development. France, by the caliber of its 1925 play, looms up as the leading contender for the next few years.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

BY NORMAN E. BROWN

President W. W. Campbell, of the University of California, says that college should come first and football next. That's the way it is now. One goes to college first to get on the football team.

Eddie Collins, rated as one of the most popular and brainy men baseball has produced, avers that the "team spirit' is disappearing in baseball and that the public interest now is centered mainly on individual stars. Collins recites how, in the old days, the Athletics for instance, drew the wrath of foreign crowds to the extent of inviting tomato showers and other social demonstrations.

He points out how other visiting teams, on numerous occasions, had to proceed back to their hotels, warily, or by back routes, to escape the peeve of the home team boosters.

Now, however, fans go out mainly to see the Ruths, Hornsbys, Cobbs, et al, perform and the team itself means little.

This may be.

And if it be so the magnates are responsible. Their methods have changed. Time was that they labored to build a team, which by the popularity as a whole, the popularity of the individuals, and the general results obtained made the townfolks adopt said team as their own and back it morally, as well as financially (through their patronage).

Now the usual method of keeping the turnstiles clicking is to go into the open market every now and then and purchase a star player, "a drawing card." Managers are hired and fired; at times, mainly to revive interest in the team rather than because of their shortcomings as baseball leaders.

Of course, on the other hand, it may be that the fans are a more self contained lot now. Although they feel at times that tossing a few cans of pre war tomatoes at various and assorted teams they are able to overcome the temptation by appealing to their better natures—and remembering the price of tomatoes.

Cozy Dolan and Jimmy OConnell, former members of the New York Giants and involved in the 1924 pre-world's series scandal, will remain on baseball's black list at least another year, it is intimated in circles close to the powers that be.

Which means that Cozy Dolan's memory will have to remain hazy that much longer. Cozy's brain will be really dusty if he doesn't use it shortly.

THREE KINGS BOW TO LONE QUEEN

IN REVIEW OF 1925 TENNIS ACTIVITIES

By NORMAN E. BROWN.

Three kings usually make a hard hand to beat, but I believe that the successes of Miss Helen Wills, queen of American tennis, in 1925, far exceed those of the three kings, Bill Tilden, Bill Johnston and Vincent Richards.

Miss Wills started off the major tournament season with her invasion of England in quest of the Wimbledon title, emblematic of the world's tennis championship. Unused to foreign playing conditions she fell before the brilliant playing of Kathleen McKane, England's highest ranking player.

Returning to this country, Miss Wills relished the prospect of meeting Miss McKane and her British sisters again in the Wightman trophy matches which were staged in August. While America failed to turn back the British invaders Miss Wills' play was the spectacular event of the matches. Meeting Miss McKane again she defeated the British maid 6-1, 1-6, 9-7.

However, even the closest admirers of Miss Wills feared for her national title, held for two years, when Miss Elizabeth Ryan, American player returning to this country after 13 years in European play, defeated the California maid in the Seabright tourney.

Both Miss McKane and Miss Ryan were entered in the National tourney, as also was Miss Joan Fry, 18-year-old miss, given second ranking in British tennis.

Miss McKane Defeats Miss Ryan.

Unfortunately Miss Wills did not get to meet both Miss McKane and Miss Ryan. The latter rivals met, however, in the earlier rounds, and Miss McKane showed her superiority over the veteran star.

Miss Wills, in an earlier round, defeated Mrs. May Sutton Bundy. But Miss Fry's victory over Mrs. Bundy was equally impressive. Miss Wills then met Miss Fry and in decisive manner turned back the younger challenger.

The semi finals, however, found Miss McKane paired with Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, seven times national champ, and Miss Wills facing Eleanor Goss.

Miss McKane defeated the Norwegian miss two out of three sets, while Miss Wills trounced Miss Goss.

Then in the finals the two young stars—the best that England and America boast—met and fought it out, Miss Wills winning 3-6, 6-0, 6-2.

Truly a wonderful showing for a girl of Miss Wills' age and comparatively short tournament experience despite the fact that she has now ruled the U. S. courts three years.

Tilden Still Tilden..

With Tilden in the men's ranks it was different. The public has come to believe Tilden can go on forever in tennis.

He proved that in the national singles, in winning that tourney the sixth consecutive time. And he proved it in turning back Jean Borotra, dashing driver of the French team, in the Davis cup challenge round to help America retain the cup.

Bill Johnston was a more spectacular figure in some ways.

Faced with the prospect of being omitted from the Davis cup singles consideration, Johnston agreed to meet Vincent Richards, his rival, in a test match. His victory in five sets did not satisfy the tourney officials so a second trial match was arranged. In this Johnston proved his superiority by defeating Richards in three straight sets, 6 3, 6-4, 7-5.

As a result of these tests Richards was paired with Williams in the doubles and Johnston and Tilden met Rene Lacoste and Borotra in the singles. Victories in the first two singles matches and in the doubles gave America a sweeping victory in the cup play.

The elimination of the Australian netters by France in the preliminary play for the cup was an interesting development. France, by the caliber of its 1925 play, looms up as the leading contender for the next few years.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

By Norman E. Brown

President W. W. Campbell, of the University of California, says that college should come first and football next. That's the way it is now. One goes to college first to get on the football team.

Eddie Collins, rated as one of the most popular and brainy men baseball has produced, avers that the "team spirit' is disappearing in baseball and that the public interest now is centered mainly on individual stars. Collins recites how, in the old days, the Athletics for instance, drew the wrath of foreign crowds to the extent of inviting tomato showers and other social demonstrations.

He points out how other visiting teams, on numerous occasions, had to proceed back to their hotels, warily, or by back routes, to escape the peeve of the home team boosters.

Now, however, fans go out mainly to see the Ruths, Hornsbys, Cobbs, et al, perform and the team itself means little.

This may be.

And if it be so the magnates are responsible. Their methods have changed. Time was that they labored to build a team, which by the popularity as a whole, the popularity of the individuals, and the general results obtained made the townfolks adopt said team as their own and back it morally, as well as financially (through their patronage).

Now the usual method of keeping the turnstiles clicking is to go into the open market every now and then and purchase a star player, "a drawing card." Managers are hired and fired; at times, mainly to revive interest in the team rather than because of their shortcomings as baseball leaders.

Of course, on the other hand, it may be that the fans are a more self contained lot now. Although they feel at times that tossing a few cans of pre war tomatoes at various and assorted teams they are able to overcome the temptation by appealing to their better natures—and remembering the price of tomatoes.

Cozy Dolan and Jimmy OConnell, former members of the New York Giants and involved in the 1924 pre-world's series scandal, will remain on baseball's black list at least another year, it is intimated in circles close to the powers that be.

Which means that Cozy Dolan's memory will have to remain hazy that much longer. Cozy's brain will be really dusty if he doesn't use it shortly.

Salem School Gym Place of Meeting on Dec. 30.

Boy Scouts from all parts of Columbiana county will take part in a mid-winter Scout jamboree, which will be held in the high school gymnasium at Salem at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening, December 30. The affair, which will be under the auspices of the Columbiana county council, Boy Scouts of America, will be directed by Harry A. Wilson, Boy Scout executive.

Feaatures of the jamboree will be an inspection of troops, a contest in knot tying, signaling, fire by friction, tug-of-war, dressing race and a handicraft display. Each troop will be permitted to enter but one article in the display.

Points in events will be:

First, five points; second, three points; third, two points and fourth, one point, except in the inspection which will be eight points for first place; six points for second place, four points for third place; two points for fourth place.

Each Scout taking part in the affair must have with him a pair of tennis shoes. The affair is open to the public.

Failure of the organizers of the recent international fair of mining teachnologists at Bucherest to inform American firms of the exhibition in time to prepare resulted in only three participants from this country while Germans and Austrians had large displays.

METHUSELAH'S WIFE

THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO MARRIED FOR MONEY

BY EDGAR POE NORRIS

THIRTY-TWO.

Four days now, and no letter from Noble. Just the conventional daily telegram, restrained and artificial in wording. Laurel ate her dinner moodily. He might at least have called her by long distance telephone. She remembered wistfully how on the last trip he made previous to their marriage, he called her from New York, and how difficult it was to hear, and all that she did understand was him saying, "I love you, I love you." At the time she was sure that the local telephone operator was listening in.

She was alone, and yet she was not alone. There was Louis, ever attentive. And Joseph, the footman, even more watchful. They grated upon her nerves. She was sure they didn't like her, anyway. The only servant on the place who seemed halfway human was Lena, the cook.

Laurel had not seen Marion since the morning after the party. She supposed that her stepdaughter was at Mrs. Daly's. Noble's sister! How unreasonable she was. The memory of that scene with her sister-in-law still burned. Brent Daly's wife would have a lot to say to Noble Harwood when he came home. Whom would he believe? Laurel was not sure that her husband would not hold her responsible, as had his sister, for Marion's wild party. He would be sure to be irritated, if for no other reason than the smashed shade upon his lovely and curious old reading lamp, a particular pet.

She got up from the dinner table without having her dessert. "I'll have coffee in the library," she told Louis.

She had pawed over Noble's assemblage of books until she knew the contents of the library almost by heart, without finding anything that particularly interested her. She had fallen back on a Trollope novel, one of a complete set Noble had bought sight unseen and never opened. It had not occurred to her to phone the local bookshop for a selection of current fiction. This night, when she took up the novel, her mind refused to become absorbed in it. She waved Louis out. "I'll serve myself."

Her mind turned to her mother. She summoned Louis back and had Joseph plug in an dbring a phone instrument.

"How are you, mother, dear? . . . . Very well. . . . Yes, Noble is still out of the city. May not be back until the first of the week. . . . Why haven't you been over? You'e been neglecting your daughter terribly. You haven't been here since I returned. . Can't you come over this evening? I'm alone. . . . I could send the car for you. You could stay all night. Do, mother. . . . . Oh, why not? . . . . . I'm sorry you have the headache. You MUST come and see me. I refuse to be deserted in this fashion."

Laurel was endeavoring to talk lightly. She realized somehow that her mother was deliberately avoidfng Noble Harwood's house. Why? . . . . She caught at a last hope.

"What is Bernice doing?. . . . She is? Please let me talk to her. . . . . Hello, sis. . . . I'd like you to come over this evening. . . . Oh, that's all right, bring your date along. Who is he—Jimmy? . . . . Fine."

She rang off with pleasure. Even Bernice and Jimmy Archer would be welcome company now. She called Louis again. "I wish you would prepare some sandwiches and put a bottle of champagne in an icebucket. Then you may go, if you like. I shall not need you again."

Louis bowed with a gleam of interest in his eye. It gave Laurel a little thrill to think that he suspected her of having arranged a rendezvous. She went upstairs and changed into a dress of black lace embroidered in silver and rhinestones; a gown that she knew Noble didn't like. She liked its superimposed layers of material, its shoulder drapery, and its decollete bolero. She spent rather longer in arraying herself than she had intended, and her guests were entering the hall, behind Louis, when she went down. She would rather have admitted them herself, and let the butler keep his suspicions.

Bernice kissed her sister affectionately, and Laurel got the idea that Bernice was acting for Jimmy Archer's benefit. After all, there was distinction in being the loving little sister of the wife of the richest man in town. Poor Bernice! Would she ever have a husband? She led the arrivals into the library.

"Very bookish," Jimmy ventured, looking around.

"Yes, and Laurel doesn't read," Bernice laughed.

Laurel colored and glared at her sister. There had been something deliberately beiittling about the remark. Managing to control her feelings, she ignored Bernice. "Would you like to dance, Jimmy?"

"Sure."

The ballroom, when not being used as such, served as the music room. It was necessary for them to push back rugs to obtain room for dancing.

"Why don't you call your servants to do this?" Bernice asked, watching the two of them perform the task.

Laurel gave a little laugh. "I'm so darned tired of being waited on that I'm glad to find something I can do myself."

Jimmy and Berenice had the first dance; but then he danced with Laurel three numbers in succession. Berenice, operating the electric phonograph, resplendent in a Louis XIV cabinet, watched them with hostile eyes. When they had had three dances together and Jimmy looked as if he intended to have her as a partner for a fourth, Laurel said quietly in his ear. "I think it's Berenice's turn."

Berenice, watching them, wondered what it was Laurel said. Instinctively she sensed that the words had something to do with her. When Laurel came over to the instrument with Jimmy, the eyes of the two women met in one of those electrical feminine glances.

Across the face of the married women is written the calm conviction that she knows everything because she is married; and in the eyes of the single girl dwells the fierce protestation that she knows nothing because she isn't.

Laurel carefully avoided being present whenever the records were finished, so Jimmy and Berenice danced on and on. At last the hostess produced the champagne and sandwiches. Jimmy, after holding back, awkwardly at first, ate ravenously, while Laurel, with no appetite and her glass untouched, watched him. Berenice, too, watched him, provoked and a little ashamed.

"One more dance with you, Laurel, before we go," Jimmy announced, when the last of the sandwiches had disappeared.

She went willingly. Dancing was in her blood. Tonight she wanted to dance on and on. Jimmy wasn't such a bad dancer. . . .

"Your gown is perfectly lovely," he said, softly.

"I'm glad you like it."

"Aren't you rather lonely here alone?"

She did not look him in the eyes. "No, no!" This as if such a thing were unthinkable. "I'm always so busy."

But Jimmy knew she was lying.

In the next chapter: Pearls of Great Price.

"Not all mothers-in-law are bad," said Justice Avory in a London court recently, in denying the suit of Arthur S. Ainsley against his wife's parents, charging that they enticed away his wife. "After all, it must be remembered that a mother-in-law is first of all a mother and only secondly a mother-in-law."

METHUSELAH'S WIFE

THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO MARRIED FOR MONEY

BY EDGAR PUG NOBLE

THIRTY-TWO.

Four days now, and no letter from Noble. Just the conventional daily telegram, restrained and artificial in wording. Laurel ate her dinner moodily. He might at least have called her by long distance telephone. She remembered wistfully how on the last trip he made previous to their marriage, he called her from New York, and how difficult it was to hear, and all that she did understand was him saying, "I love you, I love you." At the time she was sure that the local telephone operator was listening in.

She was alone, and yet she was not alone. There was Louis, ever attentive. And Joseph, the footman, even more watchful. They grated upon her nerves. She was sure they didn't like her, anyway. The only servant on the place who seemed halfway human was Lena, the cook.

Laurel had not seen Marion since the morning after the party. She supposed that her stepdaughter was at Mrs. Daly's. Noble's sister! How unreasonable she was. The memory of that scene with her sister-in-law still burned. Brent Daly's wife would have a lot to say to Noble Harwood when he came home. Whom would he believe? Laurel was not sure that her husband would not hold her responsible, as had his sister, for Marion's wild party. He would be sure to be irritated, if for no other reason than the smashed shade upon his lovely and curious old reading lamp, a particular pet.

She got up from the dinner table without having her dessert. "I'll have coffee in the library," she told Louis.

She had pawed over Noble's assemblage of books until she knew the contents of the library almost by heart, without finding anything that particularly interested her. She had fallen back on a Trollope novel, one of a complete set Noble had bought sight unseen and never opened. It had not occurred to her to phone the local bookshop for a selection of current fiction. This night, when she took up the novel, her mind refused to become absorbed in it. She waved Louis out. "I'll serve myself."

Her mind turned to her mother. She summoned Louis back and had Joseph plug in an dbring a phone instrument.

"How are you, mother, dear? . . . . Very well. . . . Yes, Noble is still out of the city. May not be back until the first of the week. . . . Why haven't you been over? You'e been neglecting your daughter terribly. You haven't been here since I returned. . Can't you come over this evening? I'm alone. . . I could send the car for you. You could stay all night. Do, mother. . . . . Oh, why not? . . . . . I'm sorry you have the headache. You MUST come and see me. I refuse to be deserted in this fashion."

Laurel was endeavoring to talk lightly. She realized somehow that her mother was deliberately avoiding Noble Harwood's house. Why? . . . . She caught at a last hope.

"What is Bernice doing?. . . . She is? Please let me talk to her. . . . . Hello, sis. . . . I'd like you to come over this evening. . . . Oh, that's all right, bring your date along. Who is he—Jimmy? . . . . Fine."

She rang off with pleasure. Even Bernice and Jimmy Archer would be welcome company now. She called Louis again. "I wish you would prepare some sandwiches and put a bottle of champagne in an icebucket. Then you may go, if you like. I shall not need you again."

Louis bowed with a gleam of interest in his eye. It gave Laurel a little thrill to think that he suspected her of having arranged a rendezvous. She went upstairs and changed into a dress of black lace embroidered in silver and rhinestones; a gown that she knew Noble didn't like. She liked its superimposed layers of material, its shoulder drapery, and its decollete bolero. She spent rather longer in arraying herself than she had intended, and her guests were entering the hall, behind Louis, when she went down. She would rather have admitted them herself, and let the butler keep his suspicions.

Bernice kissed her sister affectionately, and Laurel got the idea that Bernice was acting for Jimmy Archer's benefit. After all, there was distinction in being the loving little sister of the wife of the richest man in town. Poor Bernice! Would she ever have a husband? She led the arrivals into the library.

"Very bookish," Jimmy ventured, looking around.

"Yes, and Laurel doesn't read," Bernice laughed.

Laurel colored and glared at her sister. There had been something deliberately belittling about the remark. Managing to control her feelings, she ignored Bernice. "Would you like to dance, Jimmy?"

"Sure."

The ballroom, when not being used as such, served as the music room. It was necessary for them to push back rugs to obtain room for dancing.

"Why don't you call your servants to do this?" Bernice asked, watching the two of them perform the task.

Laurel gave a little laugh. "I'm so darned tired of being waited on that I'm glad to find something I can do myself."

Jimmy and Berenice had the first dance; but then he danced with Laurel three numbers in succession. Berenice, operating the electric phonograph, resplendent in a Louis XIV cabinet, watched them with hostile eyes. When they had had three dances together and Jimmy looked as if he intended to have her as a partner for a fourth, Laurel said quietly in his ear. "I think it's Berenice's turn."

Berenice, watching them, wondered what it was Laurel said. Instinctively she sensed that the words had something to do with her. When Laurel came over to the instrument with Jimmy, the eyes of the two women met in one of those electrical, feminine glances.

Across the face of the married women is written the calm conviction that she knows everything because she is married; and in the eyes of the single girl dwells the fierce protestation that she knows nothing because she isn't.

Laurel carefully avoided being present whenever the records were finished, so Jimmy and Berenice danced on and on. At last the hostess produced the champagne and sandwiches. Jimmy, after holding back, awkwardly at first, ate ravenously, while Laurel, with no appetite and her glass untouched, watched him. Berenice, too, watched him, provoked and a little ashamed.

"One more dance with you, Laurel, before we go," Jimmy announced, when the last of the sandwiches had disappeared.

She went willingly. Dancing was in her blood. Tonight she wanted to dance on and on. Jimmy wasn't such a bad dancer. . . .

"Your gown is perfectly lovely," he said, softly.

"I'm glad you like it."

"Aren't you rather lonely here alone?"

She did not look him in the eyes. "No, no!" This as if such a thing were unthinkable. "I'm always so busy."

But Jimmy knew she was lying.

"Not all mothers-in-law are bad," said Justice Avory in a London court recently, in denying the suit of Arthur S. Ainsley against his wife's parents, charging that they enticed away his wife. "After all, it must be remembered that a mother-in-law is first of all a mother and only secondly a mother-in-law."
